Surprise Birthday Dinner.

On Tuesday between forty and fifty friends gathered at the home of Mrs. J. Newton Jones to celebrate her 70th birthday. All brought well filled baskets of chicken, country ham, cakes, pies, pickles, etc., that make up a lovely dinner. Two long tables were placed in the dining room where the bountiful dinner was spread. Mrs. Jones was as usual about her household duties when the door bell rang, and when she answered it, she was surprised to find a host of friends gathered on the porch all wishing her "many happy returns of the day." She invited them into the house and in her ever efficient and capable manner, began to arrange for chairs to make her guests comfortable. They made Mrs. Jones be seated and then presented her with many useful and beautiful gifts, which she opened and thanked each one in her shy sweet manner. Some of the ladies went into the dining room and arranged the dinner on the two tables and then invited Mrs. Jones and her friends out to eat. A good old fashioned "talk fest" of "hard times, good times, sad times and glad times" was held during the dinner, but all went away wishing for Mrs. Jones health, wealth and happiness and many returns of the day. This was one time "Uncle Newt" was in the back ground.

Fatten Early Broilers For Poultry Market

Because there are fewer pounds of frozen poultry in cold storage at this time as compared with one year ago or with the five-year average, it may be well this spring to fatten baby chicks into fryers and broilers for early sale.

P. A. Seese, extension poultryman at State college, finds that the sale of poultry meats from the average farm represents only 27.7 percent of the total sales of poultry and poultry products. The remaining 72.3 percent comes from the sale of eggs. This was due, he explains, to the low price of all poultry meats last year, especially old hens, late fryers and broilers. Few of these were sold and the income from these sources was rather low, comparatively.

However, there is about thirty-six million pounds less of poultry meats now in storage than there was one year ago in January. This means that the demand will likely get better, especially if there is some improvement in business conditions. For that reason, he advocates the purchase and growing of baby chicks for fattening.

Only chicks from blood-tested flocks should be bought. Usually the loss from these is less than ten percent. They have a high livability as compared with chicks from non-tested flocks and if a grower can market 90 percent of his chicks as broilers he can unquestionably put them on the market at a cost not to exceed twenty cents a pound and will make money. The present low prices for feedstuffs and the increase of feed material on most farms of the State at this time, should make poultry fattening a right remunerative enterprise, thinks Mr. Seese.

Then, too, the cash from the sale of fryers and broilers is received at a time which it can be used to good advantage in the farm work.

The Marion Knitting mill is beginning to build a large addition to its present plant, taking advantage of opportunity for cheap labor.
