LOCAL BOY MAKING GOOD AT U. N. C.

Craig McClure, Forest City Graduate, Now Editor of Carolina Magazine at Chapel Hill.

David Craig (Spec) McClure, graduate of the Forest City High school in 1926, was elected editor of The Carolina Magazine at the University of North Carolina in the annual election of campus officers there on March 30.

McClure was graduated from Forest City high school with honors. After that he sought to delve further into the realms of knowledge at the state University at Chapel Hill. For the past three years he has been making an enviable record for himself there. He is an entirely self-supporting student, working in the Orange Print shop during the time not occupied by his scholastic duties.

Aside from applying to the making of excellent marks on his studies and to the making of money enough for all of his expenses, "Spec" has found time to take in various extra-curricula activities, having been contributor to the Carolina Magazine during his sophomore year, and contributing editor to the same publication during the past year. For his excellency in scholastic work he was, on April 9, initiated into Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary scholastic fraternity. This honor requires an average on three years work of above .92%.

In his election to the editorship of The Magazine, McClure piled up the largest majority of any candidate for campus offices, winning by the margin of 1135 to 347.

The Carolina Magazine is the oldest college publication in the United States, having been founded in 1844. It has had among its contributors and editors the best talent from the nationally known English department of the University. It is used as a workshop for the development of literary talent among the university students, and is published and edited entirely by these students. It is a semi-monthly publication.

McClure also won the Holt scholarship at the University this year. This scholarship amounts to $125, and is given out to the three most deserving self-help students at the University.
