FOR SKIN IRRITATIONS

Restless CHILDREN

CHILDREN will fret, often for no apparent reason. But there's always Castoria! As harmless as the recipe on the wrapper—mild and bland as it tastes. But its gentle action soothes a youngster more surely than a more powerful medicine.

That's the beauty of this special children's remedy! It may be given the tiniest infant—as often as there is need. In cases of colic, diarrhea or similar disturbance, it is invaluable. A coated tongue calls for just a few drops to ward off constipation; so does any suggestion of bad breath. Whenever children don't eat well, don't rest well, or have any little upset—this pure vegetable preparation is usually all that's needed.

DEATH CLAIMS
MRS. LOSS HUTSON

Golden Valley Woman Passes After Stroke of Paralysis—Funeral Held Sunday.

Bostic, R-3, May 19.—The death angel visited the home of Mr. Loss Hutson on Saturday evening at five-thirty and claimed his wife, Mrs. Loss Hutson. Mrs. Hutson had a stroke of paralysis on last Wednesday morning and never spoke any more. Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at two o'clock at Mt. Moriah Methodist church. Mrs. Hutson was before her marriage Miss Prudie Page. Mrs. Hutson leaves to mourn her loss her husband and seven children, the infant being just three weeks old. The family have our sympathy.

The memorial service will be held at Golden Valley Methodist church, Sunday, May 24th. Dr. M. T. Hinchshaw, former president of Rutherford college, will preach at eleven o'clock. All day services and dinner on the grounds. We hope that it will be a pretty day and a large crowd is expected to be present. The invitation is extended to the public.

ENJOYABLE PARTY.

Miss Gladys Watts entertained a large number of her friends with a party Saturday night. Many interesting games were played and also were entertained with a string band from Cliffside, Ellenboro and Forest City. Several souvenirs were given, after which delicious refreshments were served.

Those present were Pauline Erwin, Mrs. Hazel Cowder, Lorena Newton, Anna Blackburn, Mary Goode, Alma Grant, Oneida Tate, Lillian Hardin, Ona Hutchins, Ruby Owens, Nancie Owens, Ollie Beddingfield, Dellie Penson, Pearl Watts,

HISTORY OF THE SENIOR CLASS

One bright and cloudless morning On a warm September day, The Freshman class of C. S. H. Set out upon their way.

Whither were they going? To what goal were they so happily approaching? They were gorgeously arrayed and everything about them bespoke a happy and carefree existence as they started across the green plain.

But I hear a critic cry out, "Ho that can not be true, we always hear of Freshmen standing at the foot of a steep hill up which they are obliged to climb before they reach the diploma which hangs on high." This criticism applies to other days than those of the twentieth century. True there was a time when the Freshmen had before them a long and toilsome climb, but now they go merrily and leisurely on their way and appear at the end of the four years, fresh and rosy-looking just as you see us now.

It is true some changes have occurred since that far-off September morning. Perhaps you will find it hard to believe, but we are that same Freshman class, except for a few who were of former classes and did not have the heart to leave this dear spot for a few more years, who have joined us year by year. I think now that they have mustered up enough courage to leave this dear spot of gay memories. We didn't know each other as well then as we do now. We hadn't found out then that Pauline Erwin runs just as hard as she can the moment she catches sight of a boy. (We don't know which way.)

Nor did we know that Marion Toms leaves whatever he is doing when he sees a girl and is scared to death because of her. Yes, scared for fear she will get away before he has time to jolly her up a bit. Oh, no, we didn't know much about each other then. We had to find out by slow painful degrees that everyone of us is always ready to go a fishing when someone else will dig the bait, put up the lunch, carry the fishing poles and paddle the boat for us.

Neither did we know that Arthur Blanton loves mathematics better than he loves his dinner. Or that Margaret Searcy is always ready with dramatic readings; in fact, we little expected that we would have to chain her down to keep her from ranting in season and out.

It took us some little time to learn that John Blanton was fond of embroidering and knitting and all those many things. It is very soothing, he says, after a hard afternoon at football, to sit down and knit or crochet for an hour or so, making something for your best girl, and then it doesn't cost so much, and it really makes life worth living.

One characteristic, however, which we learned very early in our career, is that Virginia Magness just adores spiders, bugs and worms of all kinds. Alexander sighed for more worlds to conquer. How much more noble is her ambition, "Oh, give me," she exclaims, "a few more bugs to classify, a few more worms to watch develop."

It was several days before it dawned upon our guileless young minds that Clark Matheny loved all kinds of dirt. The horrible truth at last was discovered that he would go miles, maybe to Bat Cave, just for the privilege of getting hands, face, and clothes covered with dirt of any sort or description. We asked him one day why this was so and his answer was characteristic, "Oh, he said, "it is such fun to get cleaned up."

Very early in our experience we learned that Deveney Summers was, and is the best customer in the class of the corner drug store. What he buys we leave to your imagination and perhaps observation.

Despite our ignorance on many of these points, we know a few things at sight: that Howard Magness is the tallest boy and that Pauline Erwin is the shortest girl; that Clark's hair is not naturally curly, but has to be put up every night, that Marion Toms can't coax his mustache to grow, that Summey's hair is red and that he parts it in the middle, because it won't part anywhere else. Just what you all know, or have heard about me, I prefer to inquire. One thing I must say; however, if you know anything good about me, it isn't my fault.

—VON KING.

You get the most Value for the least Cost in Telephone service

Of all the things you buy there is none that gives so much for so little as telephone service. Many times during the day or week or month, in the ordinary affairs of life and in emergencies you see evidence of the value of the telephone and realize the indispensable part it plays in every business and social activity. Men transact a great part of their business over it. Women use it constantly to save steps and time in social and household duties. In an increasing number of ways, it adds to the comfort and security of family life. Subscribers who look back over the month and consider what the telephone has meant to them are quick to appreciate its unequalled value and low price. They realize that it really doesn't pay to try to do without it.
