Half Century Since First Telephone

The first telephone message was sent in 1876, 50 years ago. So great has been the growth of the system that now in 1926, 67,700,000 telephone conversations take place each day. The two telephones of 1876 have increased to 16,000,000 instruments today. The first telephone line of 30 feet has grown to a network of more than 40 million miles of wire; and switchboards, buildings, pole lines, cables, conduits, and other forms of plant have been constructed, costing over $2,500,000,000.

As President W. S. Gifford, of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, recently said, "The advances which have been made during the first 50 years of the work of the Bell System are unparalleled in the history of communication. They are contributions which will make forever memorable this great epoch in our progress. We are now at the beginning of a new era filled with boundless opportunities for advancement in the business and science of telephony. Upon the foundations that have been so securely laid, we can look forward to the telephone system of the future, which in effectiveness and useful service, will surpass all that has gone before."

High Standard of Justice

British justice sets up high standards for itself, as is illustrated by a story that appeared in a recent issue of the Manchester Guardian. "Mr. J. Sharpe, the Tower Bridge magistrate," the article reads, "gave a lecture to all concerned on Wednesday as to the necessity of keeping a prisoner's antecedents from the knowledge of the court until he had been found guilty. There is, of course, no more elementary principle of English justice than this. Once at the central criminal court Mr. Russell Gurney remarked to a man who had just been acquitted of burglary: 'You are a very fortunate man. I know all about you. You have been convicted three times before.' The words were no sooner out of his mouth than he was told that there were further indictments against the prisoner, but as it was impossible that he could now receive a fair trial he was discharged."

Popular Seaboard Couple Wed

Clayton, June 1—A romance of several years standing culminated in Mt. Moriah Church near here yesterday at noon, when Miss Bernice C. Kelly, of Clayton and Seaboard, became the bride of Herbert K. Harris, of Seaboard. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. R. F. Hall, in the presence of only a few relatives and friends.

The marriage, while not altogether unexpected, came as quite a surprise at this time to the people of Mt. Moriah and Seaboard, as no hint had been given of its near approach.

The bride was dressed in a tan combination traveling dress, with gloves and hat to match. She is the youngest daughter of Mr. W. H. Kelly, of the Mt. Moriah community. She is a B. A. graduate of Meredith College, and since her graduation has been engaged in teaching in Catawba County and in Seaboard, Northampton County. Mrs. Harris has won no little distinction as a teacher of English and as a producer of high school dramatics. Her classes have frequently put on Shakespearean plays at home and before the summer schools of Wake Forest, North Carolina State College and the University of North Carolina. More recently Mrs. Harris has won much fame as a producer of folk lore plays.

Mr. Harris is a young business man of Seaboard. He is engaged in farming on a large scale and in manufacturing.

Immediately after the ceremony the bridal couple left for Greensboro, and from there will go to Washington and points North. After the honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Harris will be at home in Seaboard.—News and Observer.

Good Rains and Crops

The latter part of the week good rains fell which were much needed. There is a poor stand of peanuts on many farms and, owing to the dry, cool weather, all crops are small, and late. Much corn is being planted this week as well as soy beans for hay.

Crops are probably two weeks late.

HISTORY IN CAKE

This replica of historic Independence Hall in Philadelphia is a fine example of the baker's art. It was made by the chef of one of Philadelphia's leading hotels to advertise the Sesqui-Centennial International Exposition, which will open in that city June 1 and run to December 1 to celebrate the 150th anniversary of American Independence. The "State House" stands on a table at the entrance to the main dining room of the hotel.

The Vote at Rich Square

The election passed off very quietly at Rich Square and a light vote was polled. There was no exciting local contest to bring out the vote. True we had five candidates for Constable and Tax Collector and they endeavored to get out the vote; but the fact that we had so many good local men running for office made it difficult to make a choice and some stayed away rather than choose between them. The total vote here was only 328 out of a total of about 600. The candidates here for county officers with one exception (Register of Deeds) made no canvass and it is doubtful if they solicited a single vote. Following is the vote cast here:
