

SEABOARD JOINS BIG PROCESSION

Northampton Town Aligns Itself With Eastern Carolina Trade Body

Kinston, July 2—The "baby" town of the Eastern Carolina Chamber of Commerce, in point of age is Seaboard in Northampton county, according to an announcement made Thursday at headquarters of the organization in Kinston.

"As a matter of fact the towns are lining up with us so fast, we can hardly tell which is the youngest," Secretary Bartlett said when discussing the progress of this sectional organization.

Seaboard joined the ranks this week when a committee from the Aboskie branch office, headed by V. D. Strickland, made a visit there, with E. L. Bell, manager of the Aboskie branch office. A large delegation from Seaboard attended the formal opening of the Aboskie office June 11 and caught inspiration and a new vision of the development of that part of Northeastern North Carolina.

Seaboard is one of the most progressive small towns in the section and is in one of the best counties in the entire State. Northampton county has the distinction of owing no money, so the report goes. This is certainly a comfortable feeling in this day and time. It is the home county of Senator W. H. S. Burgwyn. Those joining at Seaboard are: Rev. D. P. Harris, W. D. Barbee, H. R. Harris, Dr. Carl P. Parker, Elmo Crocker, Frank Culbreth, W. G. Edwards, M. R. Stephenson, B. S. Stancell. There are others who are going to unite a little later.

Immediately following the organization of a unit of the Eastern Carolina Chamber of Commerce, plans were put on foot to set up a local chamber of commerce for Seaboard. The matter was quickly perfected and a large membership for Seaboard's local was enrolled. Rev. D. P. Harris was elected president, and W. D. Barbee made secretary. The Eastern Carolina chamber of commerce has furnished the constitution and by-laws for the local chamber and will give every assistance in making the local organization a great success. Watch Seaboard grow. is the slogan now.—News and Observer

The Correct Solution

Two women in a train argued concerning the window and at last one of them called the conductor.

"If this window is open," she declared, "I shall catch a cold and will probably die."

"If the window is shut," the other announced, "I shall suffocate."

The two glared at each other. The conductor was at a loss, but he welcomed the words of a man who sat near.

These were: "First open the window. That will kill one. Next shut it. That will kill the other. Then we will have peace."

"What kind of fish has its eyes set close together?"

"Dunno. I'll bite. What kind does?"

"A little fish, of course, you sucker."

PURPOSE OF THE MOTHER'S AID LAW

The idea incorporated in the various Mother's Aid laws that have been passed by forty-two states in the past fourteen years is that Motherhood, in its truest sense, is of financial value to the State. It seems strange that through the years we have been admonished to visit the widows and the fatherless in their affliction and to minister unto them—and that our response has been to take the children immediately and put them in an institution if space could be found. The Mothers' Aid laws are proof that citizens have realized that to break up a home of any sort is a delicate social-surgical operation, but to break up a home for poverty alone is a crime.

To give a widow a definite sum of money once a month to care for her children is only the letter of the law. The spirit takes in the realization of the mother's and children's lack of the father and all that his character and presence meant in the home. The Mother's Aid Fund cannot supply this need, but the superintendents of welfare can, thru friendly visits and with the assistance of the county boards of welfare, help in every way possible to make the family life normal.

The Mother's Aid law is not perfect. Already several amendments are contemplated, but it is a big step forward in child welfare in North Carolina. Whether it is succeeding in the various counties administering it depends upon the interest taken in the work by the people of the counties. Well administered, it is capable of much good, poorly administered, it is dangerous. At its best it is a wonderful, constructive agency, capable of taking its place with the best of the forces for conserving the childhood of the State.—Emeth Tuttle, From the Handbook on Mother's Aid in North Carolina.

Hints For Hot Hogs

A hog will find shade in hot weather if he can, but if the shady place he finds is also hot he does not seem to realize it, and will stay there and die from overheating. For this reason it is best to close any buildings that are not cool, forcing the hogs to get shade elsewhere. The natural shade from trees is preferable to any other. If trees are not available, a good artificial shade should be made by setting posts and building a cheap framework about 4 feet from the ground, covering it with brush, hay, or straw. A shade of this kind is better than one made of boards or sheet iron. If dust accumulates the covering should be made wet by watering with a hose or bucket. This will serve the double purpose of cooling the air and settling the dust.—U. S. Department of Agriculture.

To test turpentine, place a drop or two on a piece of white paper. If pure, no trace or stain will be left.

KEEPING WELL

SHORT SKIRTS IN COLD WEATHER

DR. FREDERICK E. GREEN
Editor of "HEALTH"

THERE is no good without a corresponding bad; there is no gain without a loss. Apparently, we never get anything in this world without having to pay for it, somehow.

This is true of most things in life, women's fashions included. For years women loaded themselves with clothes. Skirts, bands, petticoats, underwear were all tight, heavy and blustering. Then came the present-day fashions. Girls and women of the present era rejoice in loose, comfortable dresses which leave their bodies free. Short, loose, thin clothes not only give them greater freedom but give them free air and plenty of sunshine on their skin.

All to the good. No question about that, only, as always, the price must be paid. For now comes the American Journal of Public Health, our leading health authority, with this tale of woe.

A chronic disease of the skin has appeared in certain parts of Europe and several cases have been shown before the Royal Society of Medicine in England. It is in the form of a reddening and thickening of the skin on the legs of young girls and women. The skin is red at first, later on blueish, thickened and swollen. There is a sense of cold and pressure. Both legs are affected, as a rule, and it is most common between the ages of fourteen and twenty. It is most frequent and troublesome in cold weather. The small blood vessels in the skin seem to be paralyzed. The cause is thought to be due to lack of protection of the skin, due to the short skirts and thin silk stockings now so universally worn. While this is not positively proven, it is certain that this particular condition has only been observed since short dresses and thin silk stockings became popular.

Fortunately, the remedy is simple. The wool and the silk and wool sport stockings now so popular, if worn in cold weather and if of sufficient thickness to protect the skin, will effectively prevent the injurious effect of the cold air on the skin.
