

Important to Voters of Albemarle

Did you register for the Bond Election in March? If not, register even though you have registered before. Otherwise you can't vote in the coming municipal election. Don't fool yourself into believing that you can vote because you registered two years ago. The order published by Mayor Groves plainly says, "it is further ordered that all qualified voters in said town who did not register for the election held on the first day of March, 1921, for voting on school bonds for said town, be required to register for said election to be held on the 3rd day of May, 1921, but all other persons are required to register for said election. This is plain. Register and tell your neighbor that he must register," provided he did not register for the March Bond Election, even though he may have registered two years ago. Don't get the matter balled up. The City Clerk, R. M. Russell is the man for you to see to get registered. The books open Friday, April 15th, and close April 23rd. Register before 5 o'clock, P. M. April 22nd.

PUT THE TURK OUT OF EUROPE FOREVER; LET GREECE HAVE CONSTANTINOPLE

In its issue of April 3, the Atlantis, the leading Greek paper of New York, has the following editorial:

This is the month when Greece celebrates the one hundredth anniversary of her independence, while her armies advance victoriously in Asia Minor putting the Turk behind those frontiers when he invaded Europe 500 years ago.

America was not yet on the map when the Hellenic Empire of Constantinople fell on that fated day of May 29, 1453. The Greek struggle for national independence had begun since that time, and found its best expression in the great revolution of 1821 to 1827, which culminated in the establishment of the Greek state.

Fifteen generations of Greeks felt during five long centuries the oppression, the barbarism and the atrocities of the most backward race that ever took possession of the most classic land of Europe. That this nation was not extinguished under the Turk during those terrible years, when Greek boys were snatched away from their homes to swell the hosts of the Janissaries, while Greek maidens were sold to slavery in the public markets, and when the life of a Christian was worth less than that of a dog, is one of the wonders of human history; but that the Greek nation has succeeded, not only in preserving its language and traditions and culture and religion, but in overthrowing the yoke of the barbarian, is one of the marvels of national vitality, which no other people has ever shown, or will ever be able to show.

Today, almost five hundred years after the fall of Constantinople and a hundred years from the Hellenic revolution of 1821, the victorious Greek capital of Eski Shehir and beyond the Black Fortress of Kara-Hissar, while from the gulf of ancient Nicomedia, renamed Ismid by the Turks, to the shores of the Black Sea, and all along the Chatalja line Greek soldiers, assisted by Greek warships, surround the Holy City of Constantinople, where the heart of the Turkish government has almost ceased to beat.

Removed is from Stamboul, the last vestige of Turkish power, and if there still is a sultan and a Turkish guard in Constantinople, their prestige is non-existent and their authority dead. Christian Europe, civilized Europe, was late in fulfilling its duty to Christendom and civilization; but finally she did, and the overthrow of Turkish power in Europe will stand forever as one of the highest accomplishments of the last war, for the victorious outcome of which America has so generously contributed.

The Ottoman Empire lay prostrate; Arabia is an independent kingdom; Palestine is free; Mesopotamia no longer pays tribute to Constantinople; Syria is an autonomous state; Thrace and the Aegean Islands, Macedonia and Epirus have rejoined their Greek motherland, even Albania is forming an independent state. There is left Armenia, still bleeding under the Turkish scimitar, and never to be free unless Turkey is definitely eliminated from Constantinople, and reduced to the status of a small state whose rule will be confined to Turks alone.

The Greek armies fighting in the interior of Asia Minor, are still fighting the battles of civilization against the hordes of barbarous Asia. They go forward fully convinced that a race which has remained in the most beautiful spot of eastern Europe for five centuries, continuously destroying all that is best in civilization, without the capacity of producing either culture, or art, or beauty, is not a rare fit to govern much more superior peoples. That was the issue at Thermopylae and Salamis between Athens and Persia, and that is the issue today between Greece and the Turks.

It is thanks to the Greek valor at Marathon that Europe was not submerged under the waves of Asiatic barbarisms; it is thanks to the millennial struggles of the Byzantine Empire against Turk and Saracen, that Europe was saved from submission to the invaders of the east.

And it is to the valor of the Greek troops fighting today in Asia Minor, that the final liquidation of the Ottoman Empire is being accomplished under our eyes.

The Turk has fallen, and Greece is back in her old colonies, in the cities built by Greeks, in the temples and churches that marked the advance of the race under both its pagan and Christian civilization.

For one thousand years Constantinople as the center of the Greek Byzantine Empire has served Europe and upheld the banner of western culture against the barbarians of east and north. For five hundred years the Turk remained in Constantinople and the Near East, as a butchering, demoralizing, grafting, incompetent, reactionary, and uncivilized intruder, a foreigner to the civilization of Europe, and an enemy of liberty and progress.

Now his turn to go has come, and the Greek army and nation, and the job. But between the victories of the Greek army and nation, and the utter elimination of the Turk from all power in the Near East, stands the diplomacy of Europe and the selfishness of a few politicians, who are jealous of the Hellenic triumphs.

It is the time for American enlightened and liberal opinion, to raise first the voice of justice for this valiant people, whose armies fight since the dawn of history the battles of our own civilization.

For five long centuries the Turk has remained in Europe only to spread discontent and terrorism and misery. He had a long chance to make good and he did not. Greece now comes forward and asks for a chance to once more develop her old national homestead. Shall this chance, which was afforded the unspeakable Turk be denied the Hellas?

It is up to American opinion to say the word. It is up to us to repeat the familiar American slogan: Put the Turk out of Europe forever. Let Greece have Constantinople.
