

THE WEEKLY RECORD.

VOL. 3. BEAUFORT, NORTH CAROLINA, FRIDAY, MAY 4, 1888. NO. 17.

MARRIED.

DANIELS-BAGLEY.—Notwithstanding the early hour the large auditorium of the First Presbyterian church was filled with the CREME DE LA CREME of Raleigh society yesterday morning to witness the celebration of the nuptials of Mr. Joseph Daniels and Miss Adie Bagley. The church was tastefully and handsomely decorated, the vestrials being completely filled with evergreens, lilies and magnificent calla lilies, while the pulpit was covered with a large cushion of lovely flowers. In the centre of an arch of evergreens and directly over the bride and groom, hung a lovely ball of snow ball flowers. Shortly before the arrival of the bridal party a beautiful car was rendered by Misses Katie Seales and Lalla Oates. Prof. Baumann presided at the organ with his accustomed skill. Promptly at 9 o'clock the organ pealed forth the soft stirring wedding march of Mendelssohn, and party entered the church in the following order:

First, little Misses Lucy London, of Pittsboro, and Ethel Bagley, one on each aisle and preceding the ushers Messrs A. D. Jones, Jas. Mosely, Sidney Bernan and Dr. D. E. Everett. Then came the attendants, Misses Annie Phillips, of Tarboro, and Kate Fuller of Raleigh, and opposite them Messrs. Herbert Jackson, of Raleigh, and Mr. Vernon Long, of Winston; Misses Gertrude Winder, of Raleigh, and Sadie Bingham, of Bingham's School, and Messrs. Jas. N. Orfield, of Henderson, and D. E. Melver, of Moore County; Misses Mattie Fuller and Eliza Skinner, both of Raleigh, and Messrs. John Boudou of Goldsboro, and James McAlister, of Central Falls; Misses Louise Wilson, of Morgantown and Helen Fowle, of Raleigh, and Mr. Herber Wortz, of Wilmington, and Mr. Herbert Routree, of Wilson. The bride entered the right-hand door, accompanied by her sister Miss Belle Bagley, and the groom by his brother, Mr. Chas. C. Daniels. Proceeding up the aisle, the attendants passed in front of the vestrials and stood opposite each other, with the bride and groom in the centre. The ceremony was then performed in a solemn and impressive manner by the Rev. Dr. Watkins, and the bride and groom, who were accompanied by the attendants and ushers to the depot, took the north bound train for an extended tour. The bridesmaids wore costumes in white dresses. Altogether it was one of the most beautiful marriages ever witnessed in Raleigh. The bride and groom are among the most popular and well known of Raleigh society and have good wishes of hosts of friends who know and esteem them—News & Observer.

S. J. Moore & Bro.
FRONT STREET, BEAUFORT, N. C.
IS THE PLACE TO BUY YOUR SUPPLIES.
Dry Goods, Notions, Boots & Shoes, Hats, Caps, Clothing, Groceries, Crockery, Wood, Tin, & Glass Ware, and in fact anything usually kept in a first class store. Call soon and secure bargains.

R. THOMAS, JR.
ATTORNEY AT LAW.
Office, Turner Street,
BEAUFORT, N. C.

Practices in the courts of Carteret, Green, Jones, Onslow, Lenoir and Pamlico counties, the Supreme Court of North Carolina and the U. S. District and Circuit Courts.

D. H. PELLETIER.
ATTORNEY AT LAW
Two Doors South of Journal Office,
Craven Street West Side,
NEW BERNE, N. C.
Practice where services are desired, Residence in the Superior Courts of Carteret County, in the Federal Court at New Berne, and in the Supreme Court.

Parties in Carteret wishing my services will please write or telegraph us at New Berne.

W. AYER & SON
ADVERTISING AGENTS
PUBLISHERS OF THE WEEKLY RECORD.
ESTIMATES FOR NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING FREE
AYER & SON'S MANUAL

K. WILLIS,
DEALER IN—
MONUMENTS TOMBS & GRAVEWORK GENERALLY.
BROAD AND CRAVEN STREETS.
New Berne N. C.
P. O. BOX, 439.

THE RECORD.

G. W. Charlotte, Editor.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.
One Year..... $1.50.
Six Months..... .75.
Four Months..... .50.
Two Months..... .25.
CASH IN ADVANCE.

Entered at the Post Office at Beaufort N. C., as second class mail matter.

The Editor of this paper is not responsible for the views of correspondents.

If there is an X mark on your paper, it means that your subscription has expired. Please renew at once.

The Record is the official paper of the 9th Senatorial District, composed of the counties of Onslow, Carteret and Jones.

The Postmasters in the counties of Onslow, Carteret and Jones, are special agents of the Record, and will receive and remit for subscriptions to this paper.

TO OUR PATRONS.

Thankful to a kind and merciful providence, we are again at our desk prepared to record the daily events as they happen, for the delectation of the readers of the WEEKLY RECORD.

We have been confined to the house for several months with a severe attack of rheumatism. Owing to this cause and others, not necessary to mention here, we deemed it best to suspend the publication of the RECORD, until such time as we felt we would be able to again assume control. We send out a large number of sample copies of this issue with the hope that those who receive them will consider it a special invitation to subscribe.

We promise our patrons that the columns of our paper will contain only such matter as is fit to be read by the families of the most refined. Our aim will be to select with great care all articles appearing in the different issues. This being an active year in politics, when passion holds sway and when editors are not always too careful as to the articles appearing in their respective journals, and correspondents are too reckless in the style of their compositions for the press. We will examine every article sent us for publication and should we deem it unfit for the columns of our paper, we will reject it with the slightest hesitation.

Let it be understood that the columns of the RECORD cannot be used by anyone for the purpose of throwing mud.

It is our aim to greatly improve the RECORD, we expect to devote more time and labor to its columns in the future than we have done in the past. We are a candidate for public favor, we cordially invite your co-operation, subscribe for and advertise your business in the RECORD, and be sure to get your friends and neighbors to do likewise. Help sustain your county paper, if you will give us the patronage that an enterprise of the kind justly deserves, we promise, not in idle words, that our paper will be second to no weekly journal in the State.

With proper encouragement, we can, and will make the RECORD the Organ of the people and the pride of the citizens of the county.

The tone of the paper will be mild. It will uphold the right and denounce the wrong. It will be the peoples paper, and its columns will ever be open to them to express their views on all subjects.

LOCALS.

Sun rises 5.4. Sun sets 6.49.
March winds seem loth to leave us.
Our paper will be just what our people choose to make it.

The first day of May was a charming day.

We trust that our friends will subscribe for the RECORD at once.

The National Democratic Convention will be held in St. Louis on June 5th, 1888.

1,000,000 Menhaden were caught last week and manufactured at the factory of Chadwick & Jones.

The health of this community is better at this season than for years. The doctors all have long faces.

Advertise your goods in the RECORD if you wish to sell them. A word to the wise is sufficient.

Mr. Ed. S. Martin is getting ready to build a nice little cottage. Ed. caught his bird sometime since and is now building his cage.

The season for picnics is at hand. The little ones enjoy them if those of mature years do not. Let us have them of the enjoyment of the young fry.

Dr. Thos. B. Delamar, has moved his drug business to the new store on Front Street, adjoining the store of Capt. Wm. Sabiston.

Senator D. W. Voorhees' recent speech in the U. S. Senate in defence of the people of the South, was grand and truthful. Long live the noble Senator!

The State Democratic Convention will be held in Raleigh on May 30th.

The Congressional Convention will be held shortly. The time and place has not yet been decided upon.

Mr. W. F. Dill's new store in an ornate front street. Mr. Dill has displayed much taste in its construction.

A large number of the excursionists came over to Beaufort on Tuesday. The majority were in search of something to fill the inner man.

We hope to be able to make arrangements with our sprightly New York correspondent "Columbia," for a renewal of his interesting weekly letters from the great Metropolis.

Next Monday the Annual election for Commissioners of the town of Beaufort takes place. Candidates should have their orders in due season for election tickets.

The Steam Yacht Belle L., was in port this week, and the wharf at which she laid was crowded with white and black, all anxious to get a glimpse at a pair of monkeys which were on board.

There was a slight accident on the Wilmington & Weldon R. R., on Sunday last. The south bound train was thrown from the track and several persons were injured. Judge Avery was on board and escaped badly demoralized and very muddy.

The Carteret County Democratic Convention will meet in Beaufort on Thursday May 17th 1888. Let there be a full attendance.

The Democrats of the different precincts are requested by the Executive Committee to meet in their precincts on Saturday May 12th and elect their delegates to the County Convention.

Our growers of green peas have been shipping this succulent vegetable to Northern markets for two weeks or more. The prices realized by some have not been entirely satisfactory.

Our Methodist people are busy repainting their church. The New Berne district conference will meet in Beaufort on June 2d. A large attendance is expected, and our people are determined to have their church in good order.

The citizens of Beaufort exhausted to Morehead City in large numbers on May last. The occasion was the laying of the corner stone of the Teachers Assembly Building.

There is a new guest at the residence of Mr. Henry Engleberg our popular grocer. The guest mentioned above arrived last week, somewhat unexpectedly, and we are informed that it is a girl.

Major James C. Davis has returned from Florida, and informs us that he had a glorious time. He had the pleasure of meeting many of his old army comrades. Major Davis was attached to a Florida command during the late unpleasantness.

We noticed several half grown colored boys reeling thru the streets on Monday afternoon. It seems that they had visited Morehead City and returned loaded with vile whiskey. Have we no town officer to arrest such characters or are we to grin and bear it?

President Cleveland has appointed Judge Melville W. Fuller of Illinois to the vacant seat on the bench of the United States Supreme Court. It is conceded by everyone to be a first class appointment.

A revival is in progress at the Baptist Church in this town. Rev. Mr. Woodson is ably assisted by Rev. Mr. Hutson, who is an evangelist of no mean order. We trust that much good will be accomplished in the name of Him who died for fallen and depraved humanity.

The Episcopal and Methodist Sunday Schools went on their annual picnic yesterday. The Episcopal school went to the Port, and the Methodist school, to Wade Shore. They spent the day pleasantly, and returned home late in the afternoon completely fagged out.

Mr. Geo. A. Ramsey of Pender County has perfected arrangements to build a railroad from Burgaw, on the Wilmington & Weldon R. R., to Jacksonville, in Onslow County. The road will be twenty eight miles long, and will be built this summer. We congratulate our Onslow friends on the prospect of having an outlet for their produce.

The sound of the hammer, saw and trowel, is constantly heard in our town. Several nice brick stores are in process of construction, and one large frame store is being built on the burnt district. We are pleased to note such improvements and will in a future issue give our readers as more extended account of such improving as are underway in the town.

We acknowledge the receipt of a complimentary certificate of membership in the North Carolina Teachers Assembly. The fifth annual session of this important body will be held at their hall in Morehead City, N. C., from June 13th to 20th 1888. Every teacher in Carteret County should make application at once to Mr. E. G. Harpell, Raleigh N. C., for a certificate of membership.

Mess. Cooke & Beerman will have the management of the famous Atlantic Hotel at Morehead City, this season. These gentlemen are experienced hotelists and will make the great Atlantic Hotel one of the most delightful resorts on the coast. The Atlantic will be second to none and superior to many of the noted summer resorts. We predict that a magnificent success awaits the proprietors.

We cannot conceive of a greater nuisance than the quarrels and fights, of the boys on Turner street, during the marble shooting season. It is a nuisance and one that should be speedily abated. We also call the attention of the town authorities to the congregating of a crowd of half grown colored boys on Turner street daily, near the residence of the editor of this paper. They use vile and indecent language and they are a nuisance. The Mayor should send the constable around with both eyes open. We make free to say that such conduct would not be allowed in any other town in the State.

How few people know when to stop. If the preacher knew when to stop preaching, how much grander the effect of his sermons might be. If the general fellow knew when to stop telling his good stories how much keener their relish would be. If the frank and candid creature who tells us our faults, knew when to hold his tongue, how much less strong our impulse to strangle him would become. If the politician knew when to retire to private life, how much whiter his record would be. If the high liver knew when to stop eating, how much less sure dyspepsia would be. If we all knew just when to die, and could bring it about, how much truer our epitaphs would be. The court fool who prayed: "Oh God be merciful to me a fool," prayed deeper than he knew, but the man who prays: "Oh God, teach me to know when I have said enough, prays deeper still.

The time is near at hand for the Democratic Convention of Carteret to meet, and we wish in due season to warn all manipulators of party machinery that the people are on their guard and will not submit to packed delegations for particular candidates, regardless of the wishes of the majority of their party. If the people are not heard in their conventions they will certainly be heard from at the polls. We are not saying this for the purpose of sowing discord, but with the sole desire of promoting harmony. We know the temper of a great many of the voters of Carteret and don't believe that they can always be whipped into ranks by applying the party lass. The last election was an illustration of this fact.

Ed. RECORD.—I have noticed articles appearing from time to time in the various State papers, urging the thorough and complete organization of the Democracy. I concur in opinion with them and believe that it is all important that the party be organized at the earliest practical day, and that it be organized on the just, sound and liberal principles of Democracy. Now if you want to carry the county and State by the majority that we are entitled to, you must let the people act and not let the party leaders, who are often incompetent, and cross road politicians take control of the party and make the nominations and appointments to the different conventions. This won't do, and the masses will have none of it. The party is getting too far from the people and you must call a halt or the people will leave the party. I tell you that the people will not vote for candidates nominated by packed conventions, and when they are allowed no voice in the selections of candidates to be voted for, you must hear them in the nominating convention, or else they will speak to you in tones of thunder on the day of election and bury your state made candidates in sore defeat.

Look at the condition of the great Democratic party of North Carolina when led by Gen. W. R. Cox, Chairman of the State Ex. Com., when every Democrat of good standing in the State could take part in the Township, County, Congressional, Judicial and State Conventions and look at it now. Under the great leader, Gen. Cox, we had from seventy-five to ninety members of the House of Representatives and from thirty five to forty members of the Senate of North Carolina. How did the Legislature stand at the last session when the county, Congressional and Judicial Conventions were controlled by a select few? Look and learn wisdom from our narrow escape from utter defeat.

We hear the name of M. A. Hill frequently mentioned for the position of Sheriff of this county. Mr. Hill is a young man and thoroughly competent to fill said position. We would be pleased to see him nominated. He has been tried in that capacity and not found wanting.

It is the duty of the Democrats in the different precincts to meet and elect their delegates to the county convention, which meets in Beaufort on May 17th. Let there be no shirking of duty, elect good men to represent you, let every Democrat voter in the various precincts attend the meetings and then there will be no cause for grumbling.

Senator Bacon, of South Carolina, is the noblest man of them all. When the south is attacked by the "Bloody Shirt" flouters, it is first on his feet to defend his loved Southland and her people. He is entitled to the thanks of every man, woman and child in the South. Our gallant Senators Vance and Ransom must be more on the alert. A word to the wise is sufficient.

If rumor current in Washington should be confirmed by future developments, General Mahone and his favorite, Senator Sherman will go to the wall. It is to the effect that Mr. Blaine has written another letter supplementary to that of January, and that he intimates that if it is the will of the Republican party to place him at their head in the next national contest he will not falter, but will prosecute a vigorous campaign. It is generally credited there.

The demand for copies of Mr. Mills speech on opening the tariff debate is unprecedented. Order for thousands of copies of the speech have been given, and the committee intend that the people shall read and inform themselves as to the great burdens and inequalities of an unjust, unconstitutional war tariff. The national committee ought by all means, to have printed Senator Vance's many articles on the same subject, which have but recently appeared in the Baltimore Sun. They are just what is needed.

Our Democratic convention could do no better than to nominate Mr. C. R. Thomas Jr., to succeed himself as the representative of this county in the legislature. Mr. Thomas will greatly strengthen the National State and County tickets for the reason that he will make an active canvass of the county. In our opinion no man should receive a nomination for any office unless he is willing to go into the canvass. If an office is worth having it is worth working for. Drones should not be nominated—only live active working men.

There is not a more erroneous opinion, that so generally exists, as that party politics is demoralizing. The terms, caucuses and political conventions have an unexpressed flavor, suggestive of trike-ery, rascality and the buying of votes. We claim that these are evils attributable to the abuse and not the proper use of the political party, which so far from meeting condemnation, should be recognized as furnishing important wheels in the machinery of our Government through whose agency alone the most obscure citizen can make his influence so felt as to become a potent factor in the government. The great political parties as they stand confronting each other, each composed of its millions of free voters from every township, school district and town in the broad land recognize the right of every man to his share and no more than his share, in the government. The organization of these great parties bring into line the millions of its adherents without force. Look at our own nominating conventions where our candidates are selected for places of honor and trust, think of the zeal in behalf of various candidates, which rises to a white heat as the claims of favorites are pushed—a zeal so intense in its antagonism as to threaten the disruption of the party; and yet when the one successful name is announced, how quickly all is changed to harmony. Will you not give credit to the various agencies which exert such power to hold the selfish aspiration of men in check, and so concentrate their influence as to render it most effective. It is the duty of the press to promote this harmony and unity of action, and not to sow broadcast dissension and discord in the ranks of the party. We should yield our preferences in order to work in unison with those whose duty it is to shape the future policy of the party, and if they set honestly, and for the good of the people—not stifling the voice of the people, then it is our duty to hold up their hands. The general welfare of the party should absorb all minor differences.

There is no more erroneous opinion, that so generally exists, as that party politics is demoralizing. The terms, caucuses and political conventions have an unexpressed flavor, suggestive of trike-ery, rascality and the buying of votes. We claim that these are evils attributable to the abuse and not the proper use of the political party, which so far from meeting condemnation, should be recognized as furnishing important wheels in the machinery of our Government through whose agency alone the most obscure citizen can make his influence so felt as to become a potent factor in the government. The great political parties as they stand confronting each other, each composed of its millions of free voters from every township, school district and town in the broad land recognize the right of every man to his share and no more than his share, in the government. The organization of these great parties bring into line the millions of its adherents without force. Look at our own nominating conventions where our candidates are selected for places of honor and trust, think of the zeal in behalf of various candidates, which rises to a white heat as the claims of favorites are pushed—a zeal so intense in its antagonism as to threaten the disruption of the party; and yet when the one successful name is announced, how quickly all is changed to harmony. Will you not give credit to the various agencies which exert such power to hold the selfish aspiration of men in check, and so concentrate their influence as to render it most effective. It is the duty of the press to promote this harmony and unity of action, and not to sow broadcast dissension and discord in the ranks of the party. We should yield our preferences in order to work in unison with those whose duty it is to shape the future policy of the party, and if they set honestly, and for the good of the people—not stifling the voice of the people, then it is our duty to hold up their hands. The general welfare of the party should absorb all minor differences.

There is no more erroneous opinion, that so generally exists, as that party politics is demoralizing. The terms, caucuses and political conventions have an unexpressed flavor, suggestive of trike-ery, rascality and the buying of votes. We claim that these are evils attributable to the abuse and not the proper use of the political party, which so far from meeting condemnation, should be recognized as furnishing important wheels in the machinery of our Government through whose agency alone the most obscure citizen can make his influence so felt as to become a potent factor in the government. The great political parties as they stand confronting each other, each composed of its millions of free voters from every township, school district and town in the broad land recognize the right of every man to his share and no more than his share, in the government. The organization of these great parties bring into line the millions of its adherents without force. Look at our own nominating conventions where our candidates are selected for places of honor and trust, think of the zeal in behalf of various candidates, which rises to a white heat as the claims of favorites are pushed—a zeal so intense in its antagonism as to threaten the disruption of the party; and yet when the one successful name is announced, how quickly all is changed to harmony. Will you not give credit to the various agencies which exert such power to hold the selfish aspiration of men in check, and so concentrate their influence as to render it most effective. It is the duty of the press to promote this harmony and unity of action, and not to sow broadcast dissension and discord in the ranks of the party. We should yield our preferences in order to work in unison with those whose duty it is to shape the future policy of the party, and if they set honestly, and for the good of the people—not stifling the voice of the people, then it is our duty to hold up their hands. The general welfare of the party should absorb all minor differences.

There is no more erroneous opinion, that so generally exists, as that party politics is demoralizing. The terms, caucuses and political conventions have an unexpressed flavor, suggestive of trike-ery, rascality and the buying of votes. We claim that these are evils attributable to the abuse and not the proper use of the political party, which so far from meeting condemnation, should be recognized as furnishing important wheels in the machinery of our Government through whose agency alone the most obscure citizen can make his influence so felt as to become a potent factor in the government. The great political parties as they stand confronting each other, each composed of its millions of free voters from every township, school district and town in the broad land recognize the right of every man to his share and no more than his share, in the government. The organization of these great parties bring into line the millions of its adherents without force. Look at our own nominating conventions where our candidates are selected for places of honor and trust, think of the zeal in behalf of various candidates, which rises to a white heat as the claims of favorites are pushed—a zeal so intense in its antagonism as to threaten the disruption of the party; and yet when the one successful name is announced, how quickly all is changed to harmony. Will you not give credit to the various agencies which exert such power to hold the selfish aspiration of men in check, and so concentrate their influence as to render it most effective. It is the duty of the press to promote this harmony and unity of action, and not to sow broadcast dissension and discord in the ranks of the party. We should yield our preferences in order to work in unison with those whose duty it is to shape the future policy of the party, and if they set honestly, and for the good of the people—not stifling the voice of the people, then it is our duty to hold up their hands. The general welfare of the party should absorb all minor differences.

There is no more erroneous opinion, that so generally exists, as that party politics is demoralizing. The terms, caucuses and political conventions have an unexpressed flavor, suggestive of trike-ery, rascality and the buying of votes. We claim that these are evils attributable to the abuse and not the proper use of the political party, which so far from meeting condemnation, should be recognized as furnishing important wheels in the machinery of our Government through whose agency alone the most obscure citizen can make his influence so felt as to become a potent factor in the government. The great political parties as they stand confronting each other, each composed of its millions of free voters from every township, school district and town in the broad land recognize the right of every man to his share and no more than his share, in the government. The organization of these great parties bring into line the millions of its adherents without force. Look at our own nominating conventions where our candidates are selected for places of honor and trust, think of the zeal in behalf of various candidates, which rises to a white heat as the claims of favorites are pushed—a zeal so intense in its antagonism as to threaten the disruption of the party; and yet when the one successful name is announced, how quickly all is changed to harmony. Will you not give credit to the various agencies which exert such power to hold the selfish aspiration of men in check, and so concentrate their influence as to render it most effective. It is the duty of the press to promote this harmony and unity of action, and not to sow broadcast dissension and discord in the ranks of the party. We should yield our preferences in order to work in unison with those whose duty it is to shape the future policy of the party, and if they set honestly, and for the good of the people—not stifling the voice of the people, then it is our duty to hold up their hands. The general welfare of the party should absorb all minor differences.

There is no more erroneous opinion, that so generally exists, as that party politics is demoralizing. The terms, caucuses and political conventions have an unexpressed flavor, suggestive of trike-ery, rascality and the buying of votes. We claim that these are evils attributable to the abuse and not the proper use of the political party, which so far from meeting condemnation, should be recognized as furnishing important wheels in the machinery of our Government through whose agency alone the most obscure citizen can make his influence so felt as to become a potent factor in the government. The great political parties as they stand confronting each other, each composed of its millions of free voters from every township, school district and town in the broad land recognize the right of every man to his share and no more than his share, in the government. The organization of these great parties bring into line the millions of its adherents without force. Look at our own nominating conventions where our candidates are selected for places of honor and trust, think of the zeal in behalf of various candidates, which rises to a white heat as the claims of favorites are pushed—a zeal so intense in its antagonism as to threaten the disruption of the party; and yet when the one successful name is announced, how quickly all is changed to harmony. Will you not give credit to the various agencies which exert such power to hold the selfish aspiration of men in check, and so concentrate their influence as to render it most effective. It is the duty of the press to promote this harmony and unity of action, and not to sow broadcast dissension and discord in the ranks of the party. We should yield our preferences in order to work in unison with those whose duty it is to shape the future policy of the party, and if they set honestly, and for the good of the people—not stifling the voice of the people, then it is our duty to hold up their hands. The general welfare of the party should absorb all minor differences.

There is no more erroneous opinion, that so generally exists, as that party politics is demoralizing. The terms, caucuses and political conventions have an unexpressed flavor, suggestive of trike-ery, rascality and the buying of votes. We claim that these are evils attributable to the abuse and not the proper use of the political party, which so far from meeting condemnation, should be recognized as furnishing important wheels in the machinery of our Government through whose agency alone the most obscure citizen can make his influence so felt as to become a potent factor in the government. The great political parties as they stand confronting each other, each composed of its millions of free voters from every township, school district and town in the broad land recognize the right of every man to his share and no more than his share, in the government. The organization of these great parties bring into line the millions of its adherents without force. Look at our own nominating conventions where our candidates are selected for places of honor and trust, think of the zeal in behalf of various candidates, which rises to a white heat as the claims of favorites are pushed—a zeal so intense in its antagonism as to threaten the disruption of the party; and yet when the one successful name is announced, how quickly all is changed to harmony. Will you not give credit to the various agencies which exert such power to hold the selfish aspiration of men in check, and so concentrate their influence as to render it most effective. It is the duty of the press to promote this harmony and unity of action, and not to sow broadcast dissension and discord in the ranks of the party. We should yield our preferences in order to work in unison with those whose duty it is to shape the future policy of the party, and if they set honestly, and for the good of the people—not stifling the voice of the people, then it is our duty to hold up their hands. The general welfare of the party should absorb all minor differences.

There is no more erroneous opinion, that so generally exists, as that party politics is demoralizing. The terms, caucuses and political conventions have an unexpressed flavor, suggestive of trike-ery, rascality and the buying of votes. We claim that these are evils attributable to the abuse and not the proper use of the political party, which so far from meeting condemnation, should be recognized as furnishing important wheels in the machinery of our Government through whose agency alone the most obscure citizen can make his influence so felt as to become a potent factor in the government. The great political parties as they stand confronting each other, each composed of its millions of free voters from every township, school district and town in the broad land recognize the right of every man to his share and no more than his share, in the government. The organization of these great parties bring into line the millions of its adherents without force. Look at our own nominating conventions where our candidates are selected for places of honor and trust, think of the zeal in behalf of various candidates, which rises to a white heat as the claims of favorites are pushed—a zeal so intense in its antagonism as to threaten the disruption of the party; and yet when the one successful name is announced, how quickly all is changed to harmony. Will you not give credit to the various agencies which exert such power to hold the selfish aspiration of men in check, and so concentrate their influence as to render it most effective. It is the duty of the press to promote this harmony and unity of action, and not to sow broadcast dissension and discord in the ranks of the party. We should yield our preferences in order to work in unison with those whose duty it is to shape the future policy of the party, and if they set honestly, and for the good of the people—not stifling the voice of the people, then it is our duty to hold up their hands. The general welfare of the party should absorb all minor differences.

There is no more erroneous opinion, that so generally exists, as that party politics is demoralizing. The terms, caucuses and political conventions have an unexpressed flavor, suggestive of trike-ery, rascality and the buying of votes. We claim that these are evils attributable to the abuse and not the proper use of the political party, which so far from meeting condemnation, should be recognized as furnishing important wheels in the machinery of our Government through whose agency alone the most obscure citizen can make his influence so felt as to become a potent factor in the government. The great political parties as they stand confronting each other, each composed of its millions of free voters from every township, school district and town in the broad land recognize the right of every man to his share and no more than his share, in the government. The organization of these great parties bring into line the millions of its adherents without force. Look at our own nominating conventions where our candidates are selected for places of honor and trust, think of the zeal in behalf of various candidates, which rises to a white heat as the claims of favorites are pushed—a zeal so intense in its antagonism as to threaten the disruption of the party; and yet when the one successful name is announced, how quickly all is changed to harmony. Will you not give credit to the various agencies which exert such power to hold the selfish aspiration of men in check, and so concentrate their influence as to render it most effective. It is the duty of the press to promote this harmony and unity of action, and not to sow broadcast dissension and discord in the ranks of the party. We should yield our preferences in order to work in unison with those whose duty it is to shape the future policy of the party, and if they set honestly, and for the good of the people—not stifling the voice of the people, then it is our duty to hold up their hands. The general welfare of the party should absorb all minor differences.

There is no more erroneous opinion, that so generally exists, as that party politics is demoralizing. The terms, caucuses and political conventions have an unexpressed flavor, suggestive of trike-ery, rascality and the buying of votes. We claim that these are evils attributable to the abuse and not the proper use of the political party, which so far from meeting condemnation, should be recognized as furnishing important wheels in the machinery of our Government through whose agency alone the most obscure citizen can make his influence so felt as to become a potent factor in the government. The great political parties as they stand confronting each other, each composed of its millions of free voters from every township, school district and town in the broad land recognize the right of every man to his share and no more than his share, in the government. The organization of these great parties bring into line the millions of its adherents without force. Look at our own nominating conventions where our candidates are selected for places of honor and trust, think of the zeal in behalf of various candidates, which rises to a white heat as the claims of favorites are pushed—a zeal so intense in its antagonism as to threaten the disruption of the party; and yet when the one successful name is announced, how quickly all is changed to harmony. Will you not give credit to the various agencies which exert such power to hold the selfish aspiration of men in check, and so concentrate their influence as to render it most effective. It is the duty of the press to promote this harmony and unity of action, and not to sow broadcast dissension and discord in the ranks of the party. We should yield our preferences in order to work in unison with those whose duty it is to shape the future policy of the party, and if they set honestly, and for the good of the people—not stifling the voice of the people, then it is our duty to hold up their hands. The general welfare of the party should absorb all minor differences.

There is no more erroneous opinion, that so generally exists, as that party politics is demoralizing. The terms, caucuses and political conventions have an unexpressed flavor, suggestive of trike-ery, rascality and the buying of votes. We claim that these are evils attributable to the abuse and not the proper use of the political party, which so far from meeting condemnation, should be recognized as furnishing important wheels in the machinery of our Government through whose agency alone the most obscure citizen can make his influence so felt as to become a potent factor in the government. The great political parties as they stand confronting each other, each composed of its millions of free voters from every township, school district and town in the broad land recognize the right of every man to his share and no more than his share, in the government. The organization of these great parties bring into line the millions of its adherents without force. Look at our own nominating conventions where our candidates are selected for places of honor and trust, think of the zeal in behalf of various candidates, which rises to a white heat as the claims of favorites are pushed—a zeal so intense in its antagonism as to threaten the disruption of the party; and yet when the one successful name is announced, how quickly all is changed to harmony. Will you not give credit to the various agencies which exert such power to hold the selfish aspiration of men in check, and so concentrate their influence as to render it most effective. It is the duty of the press to promote this harmony and unity of action, and not to sow broadcast dissension and discord in the ranks of the party. We should yield our preferences in order to work in unison with those whose duty it is to shape the future policy of the party, and if they set honestly, and for the good of the people—not stifling the voice of the people, then it is our duty to hold up their hands. The general welfare of the party should absorb all minor differences.

There is no more erroneous opinion, that so generally exists, as that party politics is demoralizing. The terms, caucuses and political conventions have an unexpressed flavor, suggestive of trike-ery, rascality and the buying of votes. We claim that these are evils attributable to the abuse and not the proper use of the political party, which so far from meeting condemnation, should be recognized as furnishing important wheels in the machinery of our Government through whose agency alone the most obscure citizen can make his influence so felt as to become a potent factor in the government. The great political parties as they stand confronting each other, each composed of its millions of free voters from every township, school district and town in the broad land recognize the right of every man to his share and no more than his share, in the government. The organization of these great parties bring into line the millions of its adherents without force. Look at our own nominating conventions where our candidates are selected for places of honor and trust, think of the zeal in behalf of various candidates, which rises to a white heat as the claims of favorites are pushed—a zeal so intense in its antagonism as to threaten the disruption of the party; and yet when the one successful name is announced, how quickly all is changed to harmony. Will you not give credit to the various agencies which exert such power to hold the selfish aspiration of men in check, and so concentrate their influence as to render it most effective. It is the duty of the press to promote this harmony and unity of action, and not to sow broadcast dissension and discord in the ranks of the party. We should yield our preferences in order to work in unison with those whose duty it is to shape the future policy of the party, and if they set honestly, and for the good of the people—not stifling the voice of the people, then it is our duty to hold up their hands. The general welfare of the party should absorb all minor differences.

There is no more erroneous opinion, that so generally exists, as that party politics is demoralizing. The terms, caucuses and political conventions have an unexpressed flavor, suggestive of trike-ery, rascality and the buying of votes. We claim that these are evils attributable to the abuse and not the proper use of the political party, which so far from meeting condemnation, should be recognized as furnishing important wheels in the machinery of our Government through whose agency alone the most obscure citizen can make his influence so felt as to become a potent factor in the government. The great political parties as they stand confronting each other, each composed of its millions of free voters from every township, school district and town in the broad land recognize the right of every man to his share and no more than his share, in the government. The organization of these great parties bring into line the millions of its adherents without force. Look at our own nominating conventions where our candidates are selected for places of honor and trust, think of the zeal in behalf of various candidates, which rises to a white heat as the claims of favorites are pushed—a zeal so intense in its antagonism as to threaten the disruption of the party; and yet when the one successful name is announced, how quickly all is changed to harmony. Will you not give credit to the various agencies which exert such power to hold the selfish aspiration of men in check, and so concentrate their influence as to render it most effective. It is the duty of the press to promote this harmony and unity of action, and not to sow broadcast dissension and discord in the ranks of the party. We should yield our preferences in order to work in unison with those whose duty it is to shape the future policy of the party, and if they set honestly, and for the good of the people—not stifling the voice of the people, then it is our duty to hold up their hands. The general welfare of the party should absorb all minor differences.