Does Prohibition Prohibit.

The Durham Herald takes a shot at the situation there in regard to whiskey drinking as follows: "There is perhaps more Sunday drinking in this town now than before we had prohibition for the reason that the man who violates the law everyday in the week cannot be expected to have any regard for the Sabbath." If the law-abiding sentiment in a town is not strong enough to cope with those who persist in breaking laws it looks like serious proposition.—Raleigh Post.

This is the general result of all prohibitory laws in all sections, everywhere so far as we have been able to see, hear or know of their workings from the birth of prohibition up to the present date. Prohibition does not prohibit or has not so far, up to the present date at any place where it has ever been a law and we do not believe it ever will. This is our opinion publicly expressed, not only now but on a good many other occasions and we have never yet seen, a place under prohibitory laws, where drinking was stopped, or lessened while the drunk habit is an evil, so is prohibition and which of the two is the least; or which of the two is the greatest, are both debatable propositions.

Card Players Fined.

Goldsboro, N. C., April 15th.—Special Before the grand jury adjourned this week warrants were issued against a number of prominent people for playing cards. The case attracted quite a deal of attention and has caused considerable comment. The parties were all reputable business men who had been indulging in social games. The cases came up before Judge Moore yesterday, and the defendants all submitted. A fine of $50 and costs was imposed.—Raleigh Post.

This seems to mean that the people are beginning to wake up to the importance of enforcing the law, this is as it should be, the law let it be either a good or a bad law should be enforced so long as it remains the law of the land, and the sooner grand jurors and justices of the peace get to doing their duty, observing their oaths and enforcing the Criminal law of the land, the quicker it will be seen that the morals of the country are improved and improving. This law against gambling is an old one, and has been openly violated in some places ever since its passage. Even young boys, who have ever think themselves men have engaged in this sport for past time until the midnight cock gave warning to them to disperse. We suspect right in this town it has been done, break it up by enforcing the law. Let none escape. No man or boy who is not too good to break or violate laws should be considered too good to be punished. Punish all, treat all alike.

Appomatox.

The Appomatox affair is all over and peace and happiness prevailed; every body who went enjoyed the trip nothing was done to mar the happiness of any one. It was found that there was glor enough won upon the battlefields of that memorial struggle by the Confederate or Southern Soldiers to go around, and give all the living ones all that they were entitled to, and a bountiful supply left for future distribution, without detracting from the dead of any, or impeding the progress of truthful history.

Sully has got to the head of the cotton farmers organization, and says to them hold your cotton, and reduce your acreage, and you will win the fight that ten cent cotton is now in sight, or words to that effect.

In Jail.

Sheriff Campen with a warrant to arrest one—King, a colored man, upon a warrant of false pretense. The negro was at work on the P O & W R R when the Sheriff made the arrest, King's brother came to his rescue with a drawn axe, one got away while the Sheriff was tying King. In making the arrest the negro bit the Sheriff severely on the arm where he had been vaccinated, and on the hand. Mr. Herbert Riggs who came to the rescue of Sheriff Campen, was bitten by the negro. King is now in jail under two charges, false pretence and resisting an officer.
