Cape Lookout Scene Of Lively Battle

(By Jimmie Guthrie)

I don't know anything about the battle of Bull Run only what I read, but if the Battle of Cape Lookout which occurred early and lasted late last Wednesday Night, didn't beat 2 to 1 then I will hoist my White flag and give up the ship.

If we remember correctly, those people at Cape Look Out have been regularly engaged in dancing and whiling away their time every summer with all ease and comfort.

The Musicians who were John W. Rose, Thomas Rose, Ivey Scott and Joe Rose, could and always courteously entertained one and all who visit that portion of the Eastern Shores of North Carolina using every kind of instrument from a pipe organ to an ordinary ten cent pan, until last Wednesday night when the boat that belongs to the people of the State of North Carolina, and called Capt. J. A. Nelson glided so leisurely along the salt caked beach of Cape Lookout, and dropped her anchor inside the old Wreck Point where the turtle can be seen to rise with several inches of sticking mud on his back.

Possibly those mud Turtles a rose to catch the first glimpse of the occupants of this beautiful and well dressed ship of the state.

I wonder if those turtles realized the fact that the Red whiskey floated so briskly above them, were soon to cause a fuss and cuss and bruised faces, eye bones broken, women fainting and everthing, as it did.

I do not know those men who were in the big yacht, therefore I call no names but if I did know them and heard what I have, were it my brother Mart I would tell the people his name.

The whiskey what gave so many black eyes was not H. B. Hunter as some may suppose, neither was it of the compass signal station boys, according to reliable reports it was of the big boat who, we would be glad, if they want another spree that they go to Ocracoke where the people do not fight while drinking.

Of course Capt John was not on the boat therefore did not have an acting part in this affray. Nevertheless it is an impossibility for the Governor of this State to rid its people of this stuff if they continue taking several gallons of it to them, as has been reported, and as is the general talk. Many times have I been told those who tell we the good and bad news, that those folks who visit on the State Boat are nice gentlemen of high reputation, they are those who lead while we follow. But sure to God in the case of last week battle at Cape Lookout among the silent beautiful grass hills, where the roar of the white capped billows pass over the face of the visitor a lullaby, those brave men of State, if reports are true, made a road that I would not like to walk. Those who did walk this road are now all beat up and have families who were thinking at the time their husbands and daddies were to get bread, clothes books and school supplies from them.

Were this a club's yacht or any private concern that has acted in this manner then we would be helpless, but if those boys did get poisonous drunk which caused all this trouble and grief on board the Fish Commission boat, the boat that was to protect us, to be to every beck and call, then we as a people protest, as rightfully we should.

Such men are only servants of the people supposed to be looking after the best interest of same. As sure as I live today, I thought that the Governor of each State had instructions from the powers to clean up this stuff so far as was in his power. I was a big vote last time for you all better be careful. If I write anything at all about it this is a little as I can tell. The boat can only be known among we people as the booze yacht. Last Sunday night while Capt. Billie Davis and family were in church some unknown piece of humanity visited his home taking his trunk with all of his belongings except money in the invader pilaging the entire house the invaders left, leaving the ruined trunk near the noted shell point.

He is dangerous among our people and ought to be run down.

You know there's a playground on the Cape Hills

Bout an acre, more or less, Where the people play and frolic, In a playful soft caress.

When the roses careless beckon To their friends of wealth and drink

Near the city and the playground, They were buried too near the brink.

On yonders narrow strip of Cape land, Where they fought on silent sod, 'Tis not ours, but theirs, the title, Vested by their loving God.

We, the people, have talked it over Pro and con without avail, Is why we protest to those actions Cape Lookout is not for sale.
