Selma Faith Healer Placed Under Arrest

New Bern, Sept. 10—Rev. J. M. Creech, faith healer of Selma, who has been holding two tent services here daily since the first of the month, was placed under arrest yesterday by Sheriff R. B. Lane, of Craven county, under arrest and bail provisions.

ceedings, and is now being held under $5,000 bond for his appearance in Beaufort county Superior court.

The warrant was sworn out by J. H. Rouse, of Beaufort county, who is asking $10,000 damages of the healer for alleged wrong to his home and his wife, charging Creech technically with criminal conversation and alienation of the affections of his wife.

The complaint is said to be five typewritten pages in length. The preacher recently held a series of services at Washington, Hallet S. Ward, of Washington, attorney for the plaintiff, says that because of heavy dockets, the case will probably not be called for trial during the fall in Washington.

Local friends of the faith healer are inclined to make light of the accusations. They declare that his large congregations here and elsewhere have been much benefitted physically and spiritually by him and that he has effected cures for many persons.

CUSTOM OF KISSING BIBLE ABANDONED IN CLEVELAND

Shelby, Sept. 10—Attendants at county recorder's court here recently have noticed that an old custom is no longer followed by the county tribunal.

For many years witnesses in being sworn before taking the stand were required to kiss the Bible after taking the oath. Some time ago Recorder Horace Kennedy, in order to save time and as a matter of sanitation, changed the procedure to that of having the witnesses raise their right hand instead.

"Those who are going to lie when they get on the stand and will come just as near lying after kissing the

GOOD TEACHING AND EDUCATION

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

No one believes more than I do in the desirability of having good teaching in our schools and colleges and no one more than I deplores the fact that so many of those engaged in teaching are not adequately prepared and not especially interested in those they teach.

And yet I am convinced that the intellectual progress of a child or a youth depends far more upon his own interest and persistence and determination to improve his mind than it does upon the sort of teachers he has. A poor teacher may even be a stimulus to greater effort upon the part of a student than otherwise and may result in his greater self-reliance and independence of thought.

Before I attempted to gain entrance into college I had but one teacher who had ever progressed farther than the grammar school before beginning to teach, and while in college I was under the instruction of but one man who had ever earned in course a higher than the bachelor's degree, and yet I cannot feel that I was particularly handicapped. I might be much wiser today than I now am if I had had better teachers, but perhaps I should have weaker powers of independent thought.

Brown was in to see me a few weeks ago concerning the scholastic progress of his son. The boy isn't getting on well and the father thinks that the cause of his son's mediocre accomplishment is the fact that he is being badly taught. The intellectual road is hard for him, and no one is making it as smooth and easy as he would like, and as he thinks should be done. The boy wants to be shown; he wants to be taken by the hand and led sympathetically through the confused mazes of education. He has no inclination to blaze his own trail, to find his own way, to climb unassisted over the obstacles which lie in his intellectual path. Neither Brown nor his son assume an unusual point of view. They have the general attitude that education should be made as simple and easy as possible. But that is not the way that either the mind or the body is trained.

The greatest scientist and the greatest teacher I have ever known—one of the greatest in this country and one whose name is familiarly known over the civilized world, died a few months ago. He was a specialist in a half dozen fields when most men are quite contented to star in one. He could read and speak a half dozen languages, and though he was par excellence a scientist, he was versed in history and philosophy and literature.

"In no one of the various subjects which I have taught," he said once, "have I ever had one hour of formal teaching. I have worked things out for myself."

No one had ever made the road easy for him. He was eager for knowledge, and he blazed his own trail.

As I said, no one stands for good teaching more than I do. It is helpful, but it isn't essential if one is really eager for an education.

Bible as if they hadn't kissed it. Judge Kennedy says.

D. W. MORTON ATTENDS FORESTRY ASSOCIATION

D. W. Morton of this community is attending the twentieth annual meeting of the North Carolina Forestry Association which is in session this week at North Wilkesboro. Mr. Morton believes in the systematic usage and conservation and development of the Carteret County timberland, and it was this interest in his native health that prompted him to attend this meeting. Although Carteret County does not have forest fire protection, many thousand dollars worth of timber is destroyed each year by the flames. The fire this summer was particularly destructive.

CITIZENS DESIRE BETTER CHANNELS

A depth of seven feet and width of 100 feet was requested. J. R. Morris and Mr. Abernethy argued that great benefits would accrue to this section if the improved channel should be opened. Mr. Merritt said he would give interested parties ten days in which to get up figures as to commerce handled and so on.

The third project discussed was that of the channel between Core Sound and Beaufort, known as Taylor's Creek cut. It is now seven feet deep and it is deemed desirable to make it 12 feet deep and 90 feet wide. Congressman Abernethy, C. P. Dey, W. A. Mace, F. R. Seeley and R. Hugh Hill presented strong arguments in favor of this proposed improvement. It was claimed that the three fish scrap factories located on Taylor's Creek would be able to use larger vessels and could greatly increase their business. It was also stated that other industries like the lumber business would be benefitted and Mr. Hill stated that the boat line which he represents could handle freight to a much better advantage with a deeper channel.

Before the meeting adjourned it was agreed that information in regard to traffic on the waterways would be furnished the U. S. Engineering Department by R. B. Wheatly secretary of the Beaufort Chamber of Commerce and others who are interested in the matter. After due consideration of the matter, if it is deemed worthy, a survey will be made to find out what it would cost to make the improvements which have been requested.
