ART SHIRES AIMS AT LAW CAREER

Declares He Has Quit Bad Boy Tactics.

The great "I Am" man of baseball, Arthur Charles Shires, may go back to the land of his forebears, Texas, a full-fledged lawyer, and until he does this he will be the "good" man of baseball, he said in a philosophical mood. Shires, who admitted that thirty-five is "old" for baseball players, told newspaper men he had purposely capitalized on his record as baseball's "bad" man, but that from now on he'll be a good player and what is more his conduct on the field and away will be exemplary.

The Texan, now a member of the Milwaukee Brewers, said that law had been his secret ambition for a number of years. The fact that he has half a dozen lawyer uncles had something to do with interesting him in a barrister's career, he said.

"I have always been crazy about law," related the big blond first-sacker. "I've studied it seriously for several years and I haunt courtrooms every chance I get. Law is just about the most fascinating thing in the world, next to baseball."

Art Shires.

Connie Mack, discussing the success of baseball and its future, says: "Baseball has become the greatest mass entertainment in the world. It has kept pace with the public while other forms of amusement have doubled and trebled. Baseball prices have changed but little in 30 years and probably never will change. Twenty years ago double-deck stands and 80,000 crowds were undreamed of."

"Perhaps in the future we may have fields on immense skyscrapers with domed roofs to make the game playable at all times despite the weather."

Work has been started in Paris, France, upon the reconstruction of the Palais des Sports, which is designed to imitate Madison Square Garden of New York, and give the old world an arena where every form of sport and entertainment, from skating to boxing and from dancing to rodeos, will be produced. The structure will contain three boxing arenas, the largest to seat 15,000 spectators, the medium sized one 9,000, and the smallest 5,000. It will cost $500,000 and will be opened in October.

Miss Alice, black show horse, owned by the Glenwild riding school, was nervous and apparently lonesome at the Brockton fair grounds last fall, so Clifford Pratt, owner of the horse, got it Phillip, a goat, as a companion. Since then the horse and goat have been inseparable friends.

Raymond Fitzgerald, former outfielder with the Cincinnati Reds, New York Giants and more recently with Bridgeport of the Eastern league, has been purchased by the Kansas City club of the American association. Fitzgerald, twenty-four, scored 118 runs last season and drove in 98. His batting average was .322 and he fielded .979.

The wireless telegraph station at the Columbian port of Cartagena has been reopened by the government after having been closed several years. More than 8000 shipwrecks have occurred on Great Britain's coast in the last 40 years. The new Hudson River bridge will have a span of 3,500 feet, which is much greater than the span of any other suspension bridge yet built.

HAND SIGNAL IS VERY ESSENTIAL

Confusion Over Intention of Driver Is Cause of Many Accidents.

A motorist was rolling along Park avenue in New York when a small white-gloved hand shot out of the window of the car directly ahead and then disappeared.

"That woman is either going to go straight ahead, turn to the right, or turn to the left," said the motorist. "I wonder what she's going to do. I had better keep in the rear until I know."

Followed Recommendations. And in keeping in the rear until able to interpret the signal, that motorist did what such safety agencies as the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety and the Silverton Safety league recommend motorists to do.

There are almost as many opinions on the subject of motor vehicular hand signals as there are authorities on the subject of street and highway safety. But all seem to be agreed that uniformity of hand signals is a desirable thing.

Some communities have one signal to indicate that the car is about to slow down or stop, another to indicate a right-hand turn, another for a left-hand turn and so on. But most authorities are of the opinion that one signal is enough and that such signal is simply a warning that something is going to happen.

Confusion Over Signals. Confusion over hand signals is a common cause of minor, annoying accidents. The Silverton Safety league which is pledging motorists to drive carefully, believes the recommendations of the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety to make use of but one signal should be adopted.

Proficiency Needed in Cleaning Spark Plugs

More than a quarter of a century of cleaning spark plugs does not seem to have encouraged much proficiency in this branch of car care. Most owners still use gasoline or kerosene to help remove the carbon. Experience demonstrates that either of these fluids will leave a sticky film which adheres to the porcelain. Alcohol is preferable for this work for the reason that it evaporates. If there isn't any alcohol handy, just use a little metal polish, which contains a large amount of wood alcohol. Turn the plug upside down, pour in the fluid and let it stand a few minutes. Many motorists also make the mistake of scraping the porcelain usually with a knife. This results in making the glazed part rough.

Have Repair Made

If the fuse in the lighting system of your car burns out, do not be satisfied until the short circuit which caused it has been located and repairs made which will prevent its future occurrence. It is not enough that putting in a new fuse restores the circuit, for the defect which caused the first fuse to blow is probably still present although the conditions causing it to establish a short may be temporarily absent. The chances are that they will again prevail and very likely at a particularly inopportune time.

How English Merchant of 1480 Sought Custom

One of the earliest posters ever printed in England is to be seen in the Bodleian library, and concerns a Sarum service book, printed in 1480 by Caxton. It reads as follows: "If it please any man spiritual or temporal to bye our pyes of two or three commemoracions of Salisbury Use, emprinted after the form of this presert letre, whiche ben wel and truly correct, late hym come to Westmonester into the almonestrye at the reed pole, and he shall have them good and chepe." The manner of presentation is somewhat unenterprising. The goods advertised belonged to the Middle Ages, which were fast dying. But a new force had been let loose, which in the course of the next century was to revolutionize not only the art of advertising, but the whole of European culture.

Famous English Potter

Josiah Wedgwood was born on July 12, 1730. He was the youngest son of a potter and came of a family of which members had been notable potters in Staffordshire, England. Soon after the death of his father in 1739 he became skilled in the art of shaping pottery on the wheel. In 1758 he became manager of a small pottery. In 1759 he began work on his own account in the Ivy house pottery at Burslem. Salt glaze and green and yellow glaze seem to have been his first staples. However, the fine white English earthenware was just reaching perfection and Wedgwood became one of its best known makers. He presented a service of his ware to Queen Charlotte in 1762 and was appointed potter to the queen and later to the king. He next turned his attention to artistic pottery and reproduced designs based on the later phases of Greek art.

IN MEMORIAM

Resolutions by the Woman's Auxiliary of St. Paul's Parish, Beaufort, N. C., on the death of Mrs. Susie Poole Robinson.

Whereas God, in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to call to her reward a coworker, and member of our auxil-

ary. We resolve, that we have lost a faithful member, who though an invalid for several years was always interested in the work of the church and to those who knew her best she will be greatly missed and her memory ever enshrined in our hearts. That we extend to her family our deepest sympathy and ask God's blessings on each one. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Beaufort News, a copy to the family, also one placed on the minutes of the Auxiliary records.

NEW BERN AREA CROPS GIVEN STUDY BY FEDERAL EXPERT

New Bern, July 17—For the purpose of studying crop conditions in this section, Walter M. Deal, of Washington, representative of the Farmers' Seek Loan office of the United States department of agriculture is spending a few days in the section.

Craven county loans have increased yearly for the past three years, says Mr. Deal, and local farmers have made an exceptional record in the payment of loans. During this year year 380,000 farmers in 21 states have been loaned $47,000,000, the visitor says.
