Although money is hard to get and the saying goes, times are dull, I think Santa Claus remembered every little child in our community on Christmas eve and we are glad and thankful. Some perhaps received as much as in former years, others not so much, yet the little ones were happy and perhaps a little surprised to get anything at all since they hear "hard times" so much. As usual the kids arose early and found what Santa Claus had left and then went from house to house to see what had been left for others, played games and showed their candy and nuts, etc. The real Christmas spirit was seen. It isn't what we receive but what we will share with others, that makes our lives seem rich or bare.

A happy new year to every body. Let's try to make it so.
