JSEMORE COTTONSEED MEAL IN FEEDING LIVESTOCK

By F. H. Jeter
 RALEIGH, Jan. 16—If cotton seed meal formed only a minor part of the food ration fed to the hogs of North Carolina, there would be an additional profit of over $300,000 to the State to say nothing of the fertilizing material left on the land in the form of manure.

"During the year 1931, we had 96,794 sows of breeding age on the farms of this State and if we assume that each of these animals farrowed and raised ten pigs in 1932, then there would be 967,940 hogs for slaughter or sale during that year," says Earl H. Hostetler, animal husbandman at State College. "If these hogs were fed according to facts which we have determined at the Experiment Station, which includes using cottonseed meal as a part of the protein supplement, the farmers of this State would have received $300,061.40 more profit than if animal protein alone was used."

Mr. Hostetler figures that the use of cottonseed meal as a partial feed for hogs would not only give this good profit and save the need to spend money for that much fish meal or tankage but he says further the use of this cottonseed meal would have left 1,631,560 pounds of nitrogen, 790,922 pounds of phosphoric acid and 487,842 pounds of potash for plant food in the form of manure on the land.

The feeding of cottonseed meal to dairy cattle is rather well understood in the State and feeders are careful not to add too much of the meal to the ration. The station workers have known for 40 years that the meal had a toxic effect. Swine are more susceptible to this trouble than are cattle and sheep yet hogs may be fed the meal safely. The resulting gains are made rapidly and at greater profit than when animal proteins alone are used. Methods of mixing such rations may be obtained from Mr. Hostetler.

CERTIFIED FARM SEEDS GIVE BETTER YIELDS

By F. H. Jeter
 RALEIGH, Jan. 16—Whether or not it pays to use improved seeds of farm crops can be seen from the results of a recent survey reported by Dr. G. K. Middleton, seed specialist at State College, who says the differences in favor of good seeds are especially striking if the crops concerned are affected regularly by losses from disease.

"We have found that increased acre yields due to the use of certified seed will average about 20.6 per cent for corn, 23.5 per cent for wheat, 23.3 per cent for oats, 30 per cent for barley and as high as 74 per cent for Irish potatoes," says Dr. Middleton. "The results secured in recent years by the Experiment Station bear out these figures remarkably well from the purely scientific viewpoint. For instance, the new strain of Porto Rico sweet potato developed by Robert Schmidt has given an increase of 61 bushels of No. 1 stock over seed potatoes supplied by three different growers. Last year more than 1600 growers tried out this new strain and they secured under field conditions an increased yield of 18.5 per cent over the potatoes they had been using."

Dr. Middleton reports the same good results with cotton. Sixteen tests were conducted in 11 counties over a period of five years and the results from using pure seed of one variety gave an average acre yield of 555 pounds an acre of lint cotton as compared with only 478 pounds of lint per acre from seed which had not been kept pure. This is an increase of 16 per cent.

When these tests with cotton have been carried to the field by the average grower, the results have been about the same. Demonstrations conducted in Pitt and Anson counties showed average yields of 593 pounds of lint an acre for improved seeds as compared with 516 pounds for ordinary seeds.
