Large Potato Shipments Leaving Carteret County

Sixty-seven Carloads of Potatoes Have Already Left Carteret For Northern Markets; County Yield Will Be About Same It Was Last Year; Heavy Shipments of Beans and Beets Reported This Week; Cabbage Season Has Been Terminated

The daily shipments of Irish potatoes to northern markets is now well underway. Including today, more than sixty-seven carloads have left Carteret County since the last issue of the News by rail and by water. Fifty-eight carloads have gone by rail and about nine carloads by water. The Baltimore market quoted potatoes this morning at from two-fifty to three dollars a barrel.

Daily freight trains are now leaving the county, which is in contrast to three trains a week in the slack agricultural season. Owing to the bulky nature of the potato crop, almost all of this—with the exception of the very earliest—goes by either rail or boat.

Although the Irish potato crop had an increase in acreage of about thirty-five percent, there is also a reduction in the yield under the last year of about the same per cent. This, it is said, will result in about the same number of carloads this season that were marketed last spring. In 1932 two hundred and thirty carloads of potatoes were shipped out of Carteret County by rail.

Owing to the fact that many growers in Carteret have their own trucks for freighting perishable vegetables to market, it is impossible to compile the exact amount that is leaving the county for northern markets. During the past week the marketing of beans and beets has been very heavy. The Baltimore market quotes beans today at from seventy-five cents to a dollar a bushel hamper and beets are quoted at one dollar per twenty-four bunch box. Carteret has two hundred and fifty acres devoted to beans this season and about seventy-five acres to beets.

In addition to the untold number of truck loads of cabbage and beets that were shipped by trucks this season, 46 carloads of cabbage and four carloads of beets were marketed by rail.

JUSTICE KING TRIES JAMES COOK HERE TUESDAY MORNING

James Cook, colored, was tried before Justice Frank King Tuesday morning at ten o'clock in the office of the clerk of Superior Court on a charge of abusing and cursing Ben Gibbs Monday afternoon and forbidding Mr. Gibbs from going on his own property while the colored man was in a drunken condition.

Both Ben and Tom Gibbs testified that they permitted James Cook the use of a small house, provided that he work for the Gibbs only and that he have no crowds around the house. Monday James failed to go to work. Ben and Tom Gibbs went to investigate. When they arrived they found James in a drunken condition and a number of callers were in and about the house.

James got rather indignant and abused and cursed the men when they questioned his right to live at the house and not work for them. As a result of this, a warrant was sworn out. Also, during the heated affair, the colored men forbid the men from going in the house.

After hearing the evidence, Justice King found the defendant who is an ex-convict—guilty of the charge, and dismissed the case upon condition that he pay the costs of the action and be of good behavior as long as he remains in Carteret County. During the course of the trial James Cook stated that he was from Nash County.

A new receiving station has been opened for milk and cream in Morganton with 30 farmers at patrons on the opening day.

BATHERS MUST BE MORE FULLY CLAD

Owners Informed to Keep Their Dogs at Home or Take Legal Consequences

Bathers who intend to pass thru the streets of Beaufort this summer must wear full bathing suits, according to an ordinance passed by the Town Board of Commissioners at a call meeting held in the mayor's office at the Town Hall Monday evening at eight o'clock. Mayor Bayard Taylor presided and the following commissioners were present: Seth Gibbs, F. L. King, D. W. Glover and James Rumley. This ordinance regulating the costumes of bathers passing through the streets of the community came about as a result of various men appearing on the streets clad only in bathing trunks. (This ordinance is printed elsewhere in the Beaufort News).

Back in 1925 the Board passed an ordinance on the first day of June making it unlawful for any person or persons fourteen years of age and older to appear on the streets of Beaufort without suitable wraps to cover them to the knees. This became effective ten days after the first publication of the ordinance, but was rescinded on the sixteenth day of the same month.

The Board authorized Clerk T. M. Thomas, Jr., to inform the citizens of the Town of Beaufort, through the medium of the Beaufort News, that all dogs must be kept in kennels or pounds and not allowed to go on the streets without being under chain or leash, otherwise Ordinance 39 concerning the running of dogs at large will be strictly enforced. (This ordinance is reprinted elsewhere in this issue of the Beaufort News).

Commissioner Rumley and Clerk Thomas were appointed by the Board to investigate the costs of milk inspection for the Town of Beaufort and to determine whether the Town or the dairymen shall pay the costs of inspection if or when authorized. This committee will report at the regular monthly meeting for June, which will be held Monday evening.

An ordinance was enacted instructing the clerk to receive applications for beer licenses, and upon approval of the Board of Commissioners, the clerk to collect said licenses in accordance with the schedules fixed by the act of the General Assembly of the State of North Carolina.

SHUCK OYSTERS AND CLAMS NOW BY IMPROVED METHOD

(Special to The News)
Raleigh, May 29—Completing the process of taking advantage of the poor dumb oyster by causing him to yawn by chemical application, making it easy to shuck him economically, the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries Laboratory at Beaufort has now worked out a plan to open the tight-mouthed clam economically.

The method, worked out at the laboratory by Dr. Vera Koehring and Dr. H. F. Prytherch, after a series of experiments, causes no shrinkage or apparent loss of tissue fluids and the meat is in the same condition as if opened raw.

"Clams were found to be much more difficult to open than oysters and do not respond as readily to the physical and chemical treatment developed for oyster shucking," Drs. Koehring and Prytherch point out.

"The procedure is as follows: The clams are immersed in a warm bath of fresh or sea water having a temperature of 105 degrees, Fahrenheit," or, they say, it may fluctuate from 100 to 110 degrees, and additional heat should be added to compensate for the cooling the clams produce.

"In our experiments 100 per cent of the clams have opened their shells in from 10 to 20 minutes and when removed from the bath a few minutes later were completely narcotized and unable to close their shells. The shells are opened for about one-half inch so that the meats can be removed with comparative ease.

"The process is suitable for either the raw trade or canning of hard clams. In the latter industry it is much preferable to the present method of steaming clams to open them, which causes a loss of about 50 per cent of the tissue fluids. The method will be tested commercially."

Clam production in North Carolina amounted to 81,743 bushels, valued at $143,050 during the biennium of 1926-30, and 70,261 bushels valued at $70,261 in 1931-32, the Conservation and Development department reports. Cooperating with the laboratory, the department predicts that more efficient methods of opening the oysters and clams will be of considerable economic importance to the industry of this State.

OPPOSITION FOR SENATOR BAILEY APPEARS CERTAIN

His Opposing Roosevelt's Policies Has Displeased A Good Many

EHRINGHAUS MAY RUN

By M. R. DUNNAGAN

RALEIGH, May 27—More and more reports are heard in Raleigh and from the State that U. S. Senator Josiah W. Bailey will be a one-term man and there has been intimation, even if very slight, that Governor J. C. B. Ehringhaus will be his successor.

The time fits in properly, even though Governor Ehringhaus would have to make his campaign during the latter part of his term as Governor, nor should he decide to oppose Senator Bailey. The term of Senator Bailey expires following the 1938 elections, in January, 1937, and the governor's term expires early in January. His primary and election campaigns, if it should reach the latter, would both have to be made during his term.

Of course, the success of the Ehringhaus administration as Governor would be a determining factor. If, along toward its end, it is appraised as a success and if he grows in popularity, the main hurdle would have been passed. If, on the other hand, he should lose in popularity and his administration strike a series of snags he probably would not consider the Senatorial post. He may not, anyway, but then again, he might. Stranger things have happened.

Reports in Raleigh, from Washington, are that Senator Bailey is a sort of "lone wolf." Recent visitors describe his office as one not always crowded, by comparison, at least. He and his office force are described as being on the defensive, and seeking to justify Senator's Bailey's opposition to the program President Roosevelt is seeking to carry through, based on his several votes in opposition to certain phases of the reconstruction program.

Many admit and claim that Senator Bailey, as he maintains, is right, is eternally right, in not swallowing hook, line and sinker, any program proposed by anyone, without due consideration and certainty that it is right. In the same breath, these defenders of Senator Bailey say that he is wrong, committing political suicide by every vote he casts against the Roosevelt program—whether that program is right or wrong. Just now opposing it is wrong, bad wrong.

In striking contrast is the office of Senator Robert R. Reynolds, it is always filled with visitors. He sees all his time will permit him to see, in his private office. Those he cannot converse at length with, he passes the "time o' day in the outer office in a general sort of way. He is following the lead of his chief, right or wrong, and is heartily commended. And, naturally, he has become to be one of the most popular senators, these reports say.

SILVER TEA NEXT TUESDAY

The ladies of the First Baptist church will sponsor a silver tea on Tuesday afternoon June 6 at the American Legion hut on Turner street. It will begin at 4 o'clock. Miss Glennie Paul will render several piano selections.

COLLEGE COMMENCEMENTS ARE IN FULL SWING NOW

Charlotte, May 29—Cap and gown were in evidence on campuses of most of North Carolina's larger denominational colleges today with the commencement season in progress.

Davidson, Wake Forest and Greensboro College for Women are among institutions now holding the final programs. The curtain will not be dropped on the scholastic year at the state institutions of higher learning and Duke university until next week and the following one.

Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, president of Union Theological Seminary, New York, delivered the baccalaureate sermon at Davidson yesterday; Dr. Zeno Wall of Shelby, president of the State Baptist convention, preached at Wake Forest and Rev. H. Grady Hardin, of Greensboro, spoke at Greensboro college.

State Appointments Not Yet Announced

Approximately 500 Persons To Be Appointed On Various Boards And Commissions; Much Interest Felt In Several of The Places

Board of Education Makes Appointments

By M. R. DUNNAGAN

RALEIGH, May 29—Governor Ehringhaus went to his Elizabeth City home last Friday, indicating that he would return to Raleigh "by the middle of next week" and soon thereafter name approximately 500 persons who will be members of the various boards of trustees and commissions, with half a dozen important posts to be filled.

These posts, with suggestions of possible appointees, are: chairman, State Highway and Public Works Commission, E. B. Jeffress, highway chairman and George Ross Pou, prison superintendent, which is involved second in command, the rising head; commissioner of revenue, A. J. Maxwell, incumbent; Pat H. Williams, Elizabeth City; Frank L. Dunlap, Wadesboro; assistant Budget director, Pat Williams, Frank Dunlap, A. J. Maxwell, etc.; commissioner of paroles, Thad Eure, Norman Sheppard, Edwin Gill, Charles B. Aycock; director, Governor's Office of Relief, Ronald Wilson, Assistant director; Edwin Gill.

A dark horse is possible in any one or more of these places. The Governor has not even told his secretary a single man he will appoint, and his wife said that if there was any way for her to find out about appointments to be made, it would have to be through her daughter, Miss Matilda. Governor Ehringhaus as kept his own counsel as consistently as any man ever did, within the memory of the aged.

FARLEY IS PLEASED

New York, May 29—Citing the repeal victories in New York, Delaware and Nevada last week, Postmaster General Farley said tonight he fully expected "that enough states will now move to hold their elections this year so that we can have repeal with its consequent aid in the way of reduced income taxes made a part of the constitution before the year ends."

"With eight states already in favor of ratifying the 21st amendment," Farley said in a statement issued at the Democratic national headquarters here, "we have every reason to feel confident that we shall continue to progress toward repeal as fast as the elections can be held."

Illinois and Indiana vote on the question of repeal this week.

FARMER SAYS DRUNK DRIVERS DECREASING

Raleigh, May 29—Beer, instead of complicating the problem of drunken driving, has in reality served to decrease the number of drunken drivers and hence decrease the number of automobile accidents, in the opinion of Captain Charles D. Farmer, of the state highway patrol. This opinion is also shared by many of the lieutenants and patrolmen.

"There has been a noticeable decrease in the amount of drunken driving since beer went on sale May 1, and arrests for woody drivers as before that time," Captain Farmer said today.

'MARRIES' COUPLE, GETS TERM IN COUNTY HOME

Lumberton, May 31—A colored woman, Alice McGeachy, up St. Paul's way who thought she could marry folks as well as anybody and stated she didn't believe in the law "nohow" came to grief in St. Paul's recorder's court when she was convicted of marrying people without a license and drew four months' term at the county home. She appealed to superior court and is held in jail here in default of bond. The groom, Duck Caldwell, colored, was sentenced to six months on the roads. Caldwell and his bride had lived together for four weeks until Rural Policeman Bob Furnage broke up the home, making the arrests.

These posts, with suggestions of possible appointees, are: chairman, State Highway and Public Works Commission, E. B. Jeffress, highway chairman and George Ross Pou, prison superintendent, which is involved second in command, the rising head; commissioner of revenue, A. J. Maxwell, incumbent; Pat H. Williams, Elizabeth City; Frank L. Dunlap, Wadesboro; assistant Budget director, Pat Williams, Frank Dunlap, A. J. Maxwell, etc.; commissioner of paroles, Thad Eure, Norman Sheppard, Edwin Gill, Charles B. Aycock; director, Governor's Office of Relief, Ronald Wilson, Assistant director; Edwin Gill.

Governor Ehringhaus as kept his own counsel as consistently as any man ever did, within the memory of the aged.

His State School Commission, named last week, is looked upon as excellent as to personnel, with six old and five new men, all recognized as able and interested. They elected LeRoy Martin, secretary of the old board, as executive secretary; and retain the office force, including C. F. Gaddy, who was directed to handle the transportation problem; R. D. Beam, plant operations, and Mrs. Josephine Adams, stenographer. The commission spent a day going over the law and studying the needs of operation of the eight months term.

Dry Forces Lining Up
Dr. William Louis Poteat, president emeritus of Wake Forest College, was elected chairman of the United Dry Forces of North Carolina at a meeting of some 60 dry leaders in Raleigh the past week, at which plans were started for an intensive campaign against the repeal of the 18th amendment.

An executive committee of 40 members and a steering committee were named, the latter to make plans for a larger State-wide meeting, probably in Charlotte, at a later date, when further organization and campaign plans will be laid. The United Dry Forces will direct the campaign, having under its banner the W. C. T. U. and Anti-Saloon League, as well as other dry people.

Among prominent dry leaders attending were Zeb V. Turlington, attending (Continued on page eight)
