Police And Sheriffs To Attend District Meet In Greensboro

The law enforcing officers of this and neighboring counties will hold a district conference in Greenville, Thursday, November 7th, to discuss mutual problems and lay plans for concerted and continuous effort in crime prevention and highway safety. A total of eight such conferences will be held throughout the State in all. The counties forming this district are Beaufort, Carteret, Craven, Greene, Hyde, Jones, Onslow, Lenoir, Onslow, Pamlico, and Pitt. The series is being arranged thru the Law Enforcing Officers Division of the Institute of Government by the leaders of city, county, state, and federal officers in North Carolina. The district conferences, plans for which were adopted at the state-wide School of Law Enforcing Officers here last summer, will be followed by city and county schools. The Institute of Government, it was announced today, has completed arrangements for the printing of 250,000 copies of its new guidebook on Highway Safety. Those will be distributed to every officer, citizens group, and high school in the State, it was said, forming the basis for safety instruction and promotion by all three groups.

In the district conferences the morning sessions will be limited to police, sheriffs, and state patrolmen for the district. The judges and solicitors of the intermediate courts will join in the afternoon meetings.

Each district conference will culminate with a buffet supper at which mayors, members of the bar, and members of the public affairs committees of the various citizens groups will meet with the officials in the interests of co-ordinating the efforts of all groups in a state-wide program of law enforcement.

Among the topics for instruction and discussion at the conference for this district are rules of evidence, arrests, searches and seizures, investigations, preparation of cases for trial, civil service, politics in law enforcement, and uniform laws and uniform enforcement of the laws.

Along with those will be featured the co-ordination of all groups of law enforcing officers in the enforcement of the motor vehicle laws which is one phase of the larger problem of crime prevention and criminal law enforcement.

"DIRT IS NOT CHEAP" WHEN EROSION STARTS

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 16—The old expression, "dirt cheap," belongs to a past era, according to James M. Gray, Regional Director of Land Utilization for the Resettlement Administration. "Dirt is not always cheap," Mr. Gray said. "When erosion robs a man of his topsoil and leaves him with a non-productive gully-cut farm, he realizes that his dirt was worth more than gold itself. Dirt, in the sense of productive soil, is the most valuable of all the nation's resources."

Mr. Gray is directing a program designed to return selected areas of eroded lands in North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Virginia and West Virginia to profitable use, these projects being integrated with the broad national land adjustment program of the Resettlement Administration.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our many friends for the sympathy and kindnesses shown the illness and death of our beloved Esther J. Garner. We wish especially to thank those who showed their sympathy by sending floral designs.

Person County farmers paraded their pure bred cattle through the main street of Roxboro recently and held a speaking program following exhibition of the cattle.

There are 600 acres of the Crotalaria legume growing on the sandy soils of Richmond County at present. In 1932, there were only two acres in the county.

HEADS PROGRAM

Dr. H. F. Prytherch

Dr. Prytherch, director of the Bureau of Fisheries on Piver's Island will also head an Oyster Pest Control program in southeastern states. This program is of vital importance to the oyster industry. A complete story of what will be done in the various states was released from Washington this week. It is reprinted below.

OYSTER ENEMIES WILL BE ROUTED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23—Enemies of the defenseless oyster are being met this fall by an aggressive campaign of the Bureau of Fisheries.

Experiments in control of the starfish, drill and leach, authorized by special act of Congress, were said by Eimer Higgins, head of experiments at the bureau, to have evolved new and novel methods of destruction under water.

Poisonous gasses, not unlike those used to kill armies in the World War, are being tested to see if they will destroy the starfish without harming other marine life.

"Experiments are at present underway to determine the efficacy of various chemicals in killing starfish," Higgins said.

"But to avoid possible damage to other marine life, including food fish, further experimentation is necessary before practical methods can be recommended to the oyster industry."

Higgins explained experiments are being conducted in "bubbling" the water in which starfish live with poisonous gasses. Although use of chemicals to fight the enemies of oysters still remains within the experimental stage, Higgins said other methods were being worked out successfully to free oyster waters of pests. "Rapid progress has been made in developing methods of control of the oyster drill by means of trapping," he declared. "The efficiency of this method has been proved by extensive experimental work in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Virginia and North Carolina."

The number of these pests has been reduced from 10,000 to 50,000 a week in Delaware, Virginia and North Carolina waters, Higgins said. Experiments also are being conducted to determine practical methods for eradication of leeches, found primarily in Florida and gulf waters, he continued, adding that considerable progress is being made. The oyster pest extermination campaign is being carried out in a military-like style with Higgins acting as chief of staff from his Washington office. Research work is centered at Bu-

Woods Hole, Mass., Milford, Conn. and Beaufort, N. C., and a temporary laboratory at Apalachicola, Fla.
