FOR MOTHER'S DAY

This is her day, dear God, my mother's day— Let her forget the hardships she has known: The days of work and then the days of war;

Let her remember, Father, all those things They have meant pleasure to her through the years— A tender word, a baby's silken curl, A prayer to you, and quiet for her fears.

Help us to love her, as her children should, On this, her day, and all the days to come—

Keep her, dear God, through other trying hours, And take her home to you when life is done. Virginia Stanton, May, 1936.
