Farm Families Need Better Light Bulbs

Raleigh Jan 20—Many North Carolina farm families are paying for more electricity than they use, according to D. E. —ones, rural electrification specialist at State College.

This is due to the small use of current in some homes where there is a minimum charge per month, he explained.

For example, one large power company serving rural areas a minimum charge based on the cost of 50 kilowatt hours per month. At least half of its rural customers use less than 50 k. w. h., Jones stated.

These homes could have better lights and more electrical appliances without paying any more for current, he pointed out.

Instead of using 25 or 40-watt light bulbs, as some farm families do, they could use 60, 75, or 100-watt lamps for the same cost. Bulbs are expensive, and the better bulbs would only be making use of current that must be paid for anyway.

Jones also emphasized the fact that low-power bulbs do not give adequate light for reading, sewing, or other similar purposes, and as a result they cause eye-strain.

Even when better bulbs and extra equipment increase the electric bill a small amount each month, the better light and increased enjoyment of electrical conveniences is more than worth the added cost, he continued.

Jones also said that although 5,558 miles of new power lines have been promised to serve 30,434 rural customers, the actual number who receive the service may be somewhat less, as a certain percentage of the families fail to wire their homes after power has been made available in their communities.

Crop Show Expected To Attract Hundreds

Raleigh Jan. 20—Leading farmers from all parts of North Carolina will exhibit some of their finest crops at the third annual conference and seed exposition which will be held at Goldsboro February 9-10.

Hundreds of farmers and farm boys, as well as State and national agricultural authorities, are expected to attend the event which is sponsored by the North Carolina Crop Improvement Association.

All seed to be entered has been inspected and certified by the Association. Cotton, corn, Jespedeza, tobacco, and soybean seed will be on display.

As a special feature, the luncheon banquet February 10 will be broadcast through the remote facilities of Station WPTF, Raleigh, from

That story about the proposed subterranean chamber for Beaufort to be built with public monies has gone the rounds. Hundreds of newspapers and magazines with total circulation of many millions have used the story or commented on same. As a result Beaufort, on the "jagged North Carolina coast" has gotten reams and reams of advertising which could not be bought at any price. So far, incidentally, Beaufort has not gotten the subterranean chamber of refuge either.

But C. B. Gillette presents the latest comment about Beaufort and the "chamber" which appeared editorially in The States Island Advance. Those folks up there seem to have had a bit of trouble with their "tunnel." The editorial follows:

STATEN IS. PAPER COMPARE TUNNELS

BUTTERNUT TUNNEL
"Well, Staten Island has its tunnel at last, not one it wanted across the Bay, but the one nobody asked for, under Richmond terrace. It is to be used by pedestrians, but we doubt very much whether many of them will.

"At any rate, there it is, and there's the cost of it, $30,000, which went for wages, excavation, concrete work and the lining of butternut colored glazed tile, trimmed with black.

"The Butternut tunnel was started in October, 1935.

"If they had built a tunnel from St. George to the Battery at the rate this one was built, it would take 440 years to finish it.

"Perhaps the good citizens of Beaufort, N. C. have heard about our tunnel, which may have inspired them to ask Uncle Sam for the following project (we quote verbatim from the Magazine Time):

"A boomproof, gasproof subterranean chamber that will serve as a haven for the entire population if and when an enemy air fleet comes overhead intent on wiping Beaufort off the map."

George Spivey, a member of the Kenly 4-H club in Johnston County, has ordered 300 baby chicks for his broiler project this spring. He cleared exactly $97 on 300 broilers last season.

This Citizen Applied for Job But Was Told He was Past Age Limit

Holloway Mason, 77-year old resident of Gordon street, and former town commissioner dropped by The Beaufort News office yesterday and told the editor that he had applied for work on a WPA project, but that he was not given same. Later the editor in a conversation with Mrs. Ruth Roberts, certification official of the Welfare department was told that because of his advanced age, he was not certified.

Mr. Mason did not place any blame on the local welfare officials, when he was told by the editor, that it was his (the editor's) opinion that those who have charge of placing employees here had to follow in stricture of their superiors. Mr. Mason stated that he only wanted a temporary job while his son who was ill who was the main support of the family was away from his job.

The physician attending the ill son informed welfare officials that he should be able to return to work within 10 days or two weeks. In the meantime the welfare department will do what they can for the family, it was stated. But Mr. Mason, a native of Portsmouth, who left that island village when it was a town of a hundred or more families is the type of person who had rather work for something than to have it given to him. This is only one of many similar situations which the welfare officials and those advanced in years have to face from time to time.
