Many Attended Vesper Worship At Core Creek

The impressive Vesper Worship held at the Core Creek Community Church at 8:30 o'clock Sunday evening and sponsored by the Central I-H Service Club was attended by approximately three hundred persons.

As the sun sank in the west the congregation, with Miss Annie Elizabeth Coward serving as pianist and Miss Emma Jean Daniels as soloist, sang "Day Is Dying In The West," after which Rev. Y. W. Stewart, pastor of Core Creek Community Church, offered a prayer. Paul Donahon, Service Club president, read the Twenty-third psalm, "Rural Youth Sunday" was explained by Delphine Eubanks, and Virginia Stanton gave a Bible story. The church choir sang "Son of My Soul" and a male quartet from the Smyrna Glee Club beautifully rendered "Going Home."

Annie D. Foreman interestingly told how Taps began and just at twilight the worship closed with the congregation singing "Taps."

Barden To Speak At "Co-op" Day Raleigh, June 5

Raleigh, April 29. — Approximately 5,000 farmers and farm women, representing every section of North Carolina and a portion of South Carolina, are expected to gather in Raleigh on Wednesday, June 5, for the combined annual meeting of members of the North Carolina Cotton Growers Cooperative Association and patrons of the Farmers Cooperative Exchange, M. G. Mann, general manager of the two organizations, announced.

The event, which is held annually and known as "Co-op Day," will be held in the City Auditorium and will get underway at 10 o'clock.

Congressman Graham A. Barden of the third North Carolina district will deliver the principal address. His subject will be: "How National Legislation and Farm Cooperatives Can Aid the Farmer."

A full and detailed report on the last year's operations of both the Cotton Association and the FCX will be presented to the assembled members by Mr. Mann and the meeting will then be thrown open for a general discussion from the floor.

One of the highlights of the day will be the induction into office of the directors for the coming year. The directors of the Cotton Association will have already been nominated and voted on by postcard ballot prior to June 5, while the directors of the FCX will have been elected in a series of district meetings.

"We hope to have every county in the State represented as well as a number of ECX patrons from South Carolina," Mr. Mann said as he passed a blanket invitation for all prospective members to be present and learn more about their farm-owned and farm-operated cooperatives, the Cotton Association and the FCX.

Orchards Are Robbed By Vegetable Growth

Robbers! Thieves! That is what H. R. Niswonger, horticulturist of the State College Extension Service, calls weeds, grass, and other vegetative growth left in the orchard during the summer months. He explains that such plants take from the orchard trees much-needed moisture.

"Now is the time to begin the conservation of soil moisture by suppressing all vegetative growth in the orchard," Niswonger said, "especially that part over the root area."

It has been estimated, he stated, that the loss of water from bearing trees of an acre of orchard amounts to 20 barrels daily from June to September. This can be attributed to leaf surface where moisture is lost and the developing fruit, which when mature, contains about 85 per cent moisture.

"Cultivating the ground as early as possible and continuing such cultivation until late in the summer will aid in the conservation of moisture and make available the nitrogen supply," the horticulturist declared. "When the orchard is located on land subject to severe erosion, it is advisable to cultivate every other middle and reverse the practice the next year."

"Many orchards are located on sites where cultivation can not be practiced. In this case, all weeds and grass growth should be cut frequently and left to remain over the tree root area. If left to grow and form seeds, these crops rob the fruit trees of moisture and nitrogen."

Niswonger also recommended that each tree be fertilized with mineral nitrates about a month after the fruit has set, since next year's crop depends upon the amount of new growth made during the current season, and this, in turn, depends upon the nitrogen and moisture supply.

Where Living Costs Little

By Larry Nixon in The American Mercury

The Carolina Islands and sand bars aren't always places to live, but if you shop around you can find something to suit, from huge plantation houses to seaside shacks. The West is all right, but if you want water life, try the other Beaufort—up North Carolina way, on Old Topsail Inlet, facing the broad Atlantic. A newspaper man named Aycock Brown is the host, booster, and fixer-up for visitors.

Like its South Carolina namesake, Beaufort is overloaded with history. Some visitors say it's healthy too; they point out the old cemetery with not a tombstone marked later than 1888. There is plenty to do if you are restless; fishing boats to watch, people to talk with, excursions to make, and even buried treasure to be dug for. Brown will unearth an old map or two if you don't bring one of your own. If you want to put on the dog you can get a room at the Inlet Inn. Mrs. Pierson will charge you about $15 a week for quarters that are not as good as the Waldorf, but with food that Oscar would admire. There are other hotels and boarding houses, down to about $40 a month. But if that's too civilized, you can get away from it all at nearby Cape Lookout, or atarkers Island, on Core Sound, where there aren't any hotels. Some kindly citizen will feed you fish and such and let you sleep late in the mornings for $25 or $30 a month while you look for a house of your own.

For deeper solitude there is Ocracoke Island, where Blackbeard the pirate lost his head. This fisherman's island is thirty miles at sea, and a number of artists and writers winter there from time to time. If the literary atmosphere gets on your nerves, go back to the town of Atlantic on the mainland and get someone to take you out in a boat along the Sound. Here are scattered islands and shore shacks that rent for little or nothing a year. Ralph Nelson won't admit it when you first pin him down, but if a patient visitor lets him talk about fishing for a couple of days, this piscatorial information-bureau will lead the way to a house where one can live and board for $300 a year. Even if you have to build a place, it won't make a heavy dent in the savings account.

Frying Pan Shoal Wrecks Located

Southport boatmen have been busy this week locating the submerged wrecks on the Frying Pan shoals close in to Bald Head Island. The vicinity of these wrecks team with trout, sheepshead, etc. in the spring and fall. Windy storms carried away the buoys that facilitated the quick locating of these wrecks for fishing parties. Some real fishing action is being promised in fishing is promised for the near future from around Southport.

Week-end Trips For Southport

Southport reports that the days of the week-end excursions to the seashore are coming back. But coming without the choo-choo cars and the bewhiskered gentlemen who patronized them in other days.

Interests in Charlotte, particularly one of the large hotels, are actively interested and this week a representative of the movement spent two days at Southport arranging for rooms for meals and boats to accommodate the weekly parties. With weather conditions right, a passenger bus with a capacity of 48 men and women will make its first run to the coast of Brunswick and back on May 4th and 5th. It is planned to run the excursions all summer and through November.

Not Without Honor

No longer is our friend W. B. Keziah, Brunswick county's publicity-minded Moses, without honor, for Aycock Brown, who fills a similar role in Carteret county, last week had the following to say about him in a column which he writes for up-state dailies:

"Maybe I have said this before, but again I say, the person down at Southport who has made thousands of fine fishing friends for the Brunswick coast and the nearby Gulf Stream of that territory is W. B. Keziah, who is a one-man chamber of commerce—and a good one. He is a busy man, too. He writes that he has to get up at midnight in order to attend to fishing correspondence to be free to meet visitors during the day.—Southport Pilot.

Jimmie Guthrie Writes Again

To the Editor:

I'm glad the time has come when the people can vote for themselves; we are all candidates—those of us at least, who are voting for themselves annuity in this approaching election. No man or woman ought to have to be told to vote it, whether or not we get it, we ought to want it.

The "empty pocket man" is the most dangerous of all men, he will do most anything for trouble; the business man ought to be the "go ahead man" in this move.

The Townspeople here is numbering near the 300 mark. We intend to vote for those who vote for us only; those who will help us, we will help.

For instance, when the people voted for candidates same as we did last election for the county commissioners two years term. This we did in good faith, but some of the wishes of the people, made the one who wanted all of it, removed time four years, killing the people at the ballot box and making the "Government of the people, by the people and for the people," powerless. Such ought not to be done.

I am a staunch Democrat, but not that kind. It is unfair to our own party and will in the course of time create hatred and cause a manny a Hitler to be raised up in this good land of ours.

We of the Democratic party can't make ourselves get elected all the time; we must suffer defeat, and when we do, we should want all defeated, those who made their terms of office four years could have made it 24 instead.

I, therefore call upon the good people of Carteret County to let's vote for yourselves.

H. L. Balcum, Watha, is turning from cotton and tobacco to fruit trees, poultry and improved forests in his revised farm program, says R. R. Rich, Pender County Farm agent.

More terraces have been built in the winter and spring of this year in Wilson County than in any similar period in the county's history, says Farm Agent J. O. Anthony.

Madison County farmers are planning to bring in improved beef cattle from other sections so as to broaden their cattle industry, reports P. R. Elam, farm agent of the State College Extension Service.
