

Beaufort Becomes Headquarters For N. C. Marine Life

LEON GILLIKIN WRECK VICTIM

Killed Instantly Near Hancock Maryland

Leon Gillikin, 31, accompanying Doyle Lewis on a truck laden with shrimp from Beaufort and bound for Chicago, was killed instantly at Sliding Mountain, near Hancock, Maryland, when the truck they were aboard was wrecked last Saturday morning. Lewis suffered only minor injuries and returned home by bus. He was driving the truck at the time of the accident but was absolved of all blame as the wreck was unavoidable. The truck was owned by O. W. Lewis, and the shrimp were transhipped to destination following wreck.

The body of Gillikin reached mounting it, Capt. Charles Hatsell assistant to Dr. Prytherch, "doctored" the Tar Heel "gator" and nursed it back to health.

After hibernating during the winter and weathering one of the coldest spells the coast has experienced in years, the "gator" today is healthy and lively.

In addition to the aquarium Dr. Prytherch announced the opening of the new and re-modeled museum at the laboratory. Every species of marine life in the waters of North Carolina are on exhibit. The Beaufort is being developed into North Carolina's marine life headquarters.

Long has it boasted of having the only diamond back propagation farm and the only "fish farm." Now Dr. H. R. Prytherch, director of the U. S. fisheries laboratory here, announces the installation of the only salt water aquarium in the state.

The aquarium may not be as pretentious as some but the installation of glass tanks, stocked with many forms of fish and crustacean life, makes it one of the most unusual between Brooklyn and Marineland, Fla.

In addition to hundreds of colorful little fish, the tanks contain odd-shaped crabs, oysters, starfish, eels and marine reptiles. In large concrete pools nearby tourists have an opportunity of seeing giant loggerhead turtles in the various stages of growth and several species of terrapins and shell reptiles.

In another tank is a nine-foot alligator, captured by the skipper of a freighter in the inland waterway near New river last year. It was brought to Beaufort in what was thought to be a dying condition and presented to the laboratory. Instead of putting the huge reptile out of his misery and specimens, ranging from small sea horses to giant sailfish and ocean

EXPERT WILL DEMONSTRATE WATER PLANTS

Farm Water Systems Subject At Meet On Sept. 4

A demonstration on farm water systems will be held at the Newport School auditorium on Wednesday night September 4, at 8 o'clock, it was announced today by J. Y. Lassiter, Farm Agent and Miss Margaret Clark, Home Agent. H. M. Ellis, extension agricultural engineer of State College will conduct the demonstration.

Mr. Lassiter asks the people of Carteret not to pass up this opportunity of getting first hand information on farm water systems. With rural electrification going forward in leaps and bounds, there are a great many places he says, where electric water systems can be installed. He further states that there are possibilities of springs or overflowing wells in the county that can be used to drive a hydraulic ram to deliver water for farm needs.

Mr. Lassiter says that Mr. Ellis can give the people of Carteret plans for putting in a complete water system, unit by unit over an extended period, and thus keep down the amount of money at any one time.

In looking over the figures for the county, Mr. Lassiter finds that some of the people who have lived on farms for ten years walked 3,000 miles carrying water. He suggests that by putting in a good water system that this labor could be used—not to grow more crops, but to grow better crops—to increase the farm income.

Miss Clark has emphasized fact that most of the water is carried by the housewives, and she says the housewife needs this time to devote to other household activities—such as sewing, or canning from vegetables and meats, or other recreational pursuits.

Mr. Ellis says this problem involves both the housewife and farmer, and urges both to come to the meeting on September 4, at Newport.

By putting in a home water system, labor previously lost in carrying water can be spent in making the farmstead a more charming and livable place.

Rev. Israel H. Noe Is Spending Vacation In Beaufort With Family

DEAN NOE WILL TALK TO ROTES

Dr. Blomquist Was Guest Speaker Tuesday

Dean Israel H. Noe of St. James Cathedral in Memphis, Tennessee, who is spending his vacation in Beaufort accepted an invitation today to be guest speaker at the regular weekly meeting of the Beaufort Rotary Club on Tuesday night. He gave the program committee, Rotary President W. L. Woodard, Graham Duncan and Aycock Brown the assurance that he could be depended on to be guest speaker, unless something unforeseen occurred to prevent it.

On Tuesday night Dr. H. L. Blomquist, director of botanical studies at Duke University, and the Duke Marine Laboratory here was guest speaker. He made a most interesting talk on the relationship between the public and universities and the instructors employed at universities. Some splendid philosophy was expressed by the speaker.

Rotarian Cordova and Joslyn of Morehead City made up their attendance and Joe Pyron of Athens, Ga., was guest of Rotarian Aycock Brown.

Excellent attendance is expected next Tuesday night when Dean Noe speaks to the club. He is no stranger to Beaufort Rotarians, having spoke at the club meetings on other occasions when he is in town. His messages are always worthwhile and highly enjoyed by the Rotes.

Noted Theologian Makes Progress With Church

Rev. Israel Harding Noe, former dean of fashionable St. Mary's Cathedral in Memphis, Tennessee, is spending his vacation with his mother, Mrs. Susan Stanton Noe. The noted theologian who is now rector of St. James Cathedral, a church which he founded in Memphis and which has gained 551 communicants since it was organized, arrived here Tuesday accompanied by his wife, Mrs. Noe and their two daughters.

Since their arrival they have been visiting their many friends here and although Dean Noe has emphasized that he is here primarily for a rest following a strenuous and successful year with his Church, it is believed he will preach in one of the churches next Sunday.

The Beaufort News has clipped from the Memphis Commercial Appeal, a story which should be of interest to everyone who knows Dean Israel Noe. It has to do with the astounding progress he has made in the religious life of the Tennessee city. Excerpts follow:

Covering The Waterfront

By AYCOCK BROWN

MOST HUMAN story I have heard this week was told by the Rev. Joseph Mason Carraway of Merrimon. It had to do with an incident in his life that he recalls as if it were only yesterday instead of 46 years ago when he was an active minister in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The Rev. Mr. Carraway, now in the afternoon of his worthwhile 90 years here on earth tells the story this way:

"In 1894 THERE were three communities on Shackleford Banks. In two of these communities, Wade's Shore and Diamond City, were churches on my Circuit where I called regularly. There was no church at Mullet Pond, the smaller of the three communities and the residents there attended services at Wade's Shore.

"ON THIS particular occasion, I was at Mullet Pond and it was necessary for me to walk to Wade's Shore, three or four miles down the beach, where I would conduct services during the afternoon. As I walked along the beach

PROMINENT BUSINESS MAN HERE FOR YEARS

Funeral services for William P. Smith, 72, were conducted on Sunday at Ann Street Methodist Church where he attended regularly during his lifetime in Beaufort. The church auditorium was filled with friends of the deceased representing every walk of life; floral offerings in profusion were a tribute of esteem to him. Rev. W. Stanley Potter, pastor of the church conducted the final rites in the church and at the graveside in Ocean View Cemetery.

Born at Merrimon, the son of the late William P. Smith and Mrs. Smith, he was orphaned while quite young. Moving to Beaufort later

Terrapin Freak Had Short Life

A 2-headed terrapin hatched in the propagation pens on Pivers Island Tuesday, lived for about 24 hours and then died. It was the second time according to Capt. Charles Hatsell that a two headed specimen has been hatched on the island although several deformed reptiles have been discovered. The other 2-headed specimen lived for over two years before dying.

Time To Crack Down On Speeders Is Before, Not After, They Have Killed Someone.

(An Editorial)

The time to crack down on speeders is before, not after, they have killed someone," writes Keith Saunders, publicist for the Highway Safety Division, who read the editorial in The Beaufort News last week relative to speeding violations in the Carteret County seat. In the meantime, no local comments have been made about the movement this newspaper would sponsor to curb speeding. The Beaufort News had rather expected local authorities to at least say something about the condition—even if they did not plan to take any action.

Schools will start soon. There will be hundreds of children on the streets each morning, noon and afternoon. Those children, perhaps my child or your child will be the victim of a speeding automobile. Must we wait until someone is killed, crippled or possibly maimed for life before action is taken?

We urge you to read facts and figures in Keith Saunders' letter to The Editor. Excerpts follow:

"I have read with considerable interest your editorial regarding speeding on the streets of Beaufort, and wish to commend you and the News for taking a firm stand against this most dangerous of all traffic violations.

"The time to crack down on speeders is before, not after, they have killed someone.

Fake Officer Stops Wrong Car For Inspection

PATROLMAN JOHN LAWS HAPPENED TO BE DRIVER

Impersonation of an officer, driving an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor and being drunk on the highway got Ben I. Hill of Raleigh in trouble a few days ago at the Newport river bridge. In recorders court the defendant plead not guilty to driving drunk, and, nolo contendere to the other two charges.

It was the first time that such a collection of charges had ever resulted in the arrest of a person in Carteret County. Court officials state that testimony showed that Hill, who had apparently had or was on the verge of having a drink, tied traffic up at the bridge when he started stopping cars and bicycles to find faults such as no rear light on the bicycle, minor defaults with cars in addition to obstructing traffic.

The would-be-officer's mistake was to stop Patrolman John Laws and Corporal J. K. Clay of the Highway Patrol and ask for their drivers license. They turned the tables and Hill was placed under arrest. After hearing the evidence the court did not find Hill guilty of the drunkenness and driving.

Boards Postpone Meetings Until Tuesday, Sept. 3

All county and municipal governing boards have postponed their regular monthly meetings until Tuesday, September 3, instead of the first Monday or September 2. This was because Monday is Labor Day and a legal holiday. The boards affected include the Carteret Commissioners, The Board of Education and the Town Board of Aldermen.

Fishing And All Outdoors By AYCOCK BROWN

UNLESS A sailfish is landed in waters off Cape Lookout between the time this column is written on Wednesday and appears in print on Thursday, Wrightsville Beach is leading the Beaufort-Morehead sector in number of sailfish taken this season. On Wednesday, Ed McLaurin, good friend of this columnist, wired that Bryce T. Beard, Jr., 19-year-old Salisbury youth, landed a 6-foot, one inch, sailfish 12 miles off Wrightsville while fishing with Capt. Moore of the boat Valhalla. Earlier this year a baby sailfish was landed, giving Wrightsville two of this species as compared to only one for Cape Lookout, landed by a party fishing from aboard Capt. Tony Seamon's cruiser Monnie M.
