AND THEN TOMORROW

When fades the last of sunset's light, Night draws her darkness curtain tight;

And way up in the heavens fair, A golden moon is shining there,

The hours between the dusk and dawn, Pass by you like a lovely song.

But after a while it's dark no more; Old Father Time holds wide the door,

And suddenly the night is gone, While in the East there glows the dawn.

"Ball Of Fire" At Beaufort Theatre Sun., Mon., Tues.

Blending humor and human interest in unique fashion, Samuel Goldwyn's production of "Ball of Fire" co-stars Gary Cooper and Barbara Stanwyck at the head of a noteworthy cast in the year's outstanding comedy-romance. In their most startling and effective characterizations in many a day, Cooper portrays a dignified young professor of English, and Miss Stanwyck a flippant night club girl whom he encounters in the course of his research work.

With seven other specialists in knowledge, Cooper has spent the last nine years compiling a new encyclopedia. Realizing he knows practically nothing about modern slang, he sets out on a round of night life, meets the vivacious Miss Stanwyck and is fascinated by her mastery of the mysterious language.

To avoid the police, who are looking for her because of the lethal activities of her gangster boyfriend, Miss Stanwyck takes refuge in the old brownstone house where the eight professors work as a kind of literary assembly line, and soon finds herself in love with Cooper. Cooper also succumbs to this unfamiliar emotion, proposes to her and is accepted.

But when the gangster decides to marry Miss Stanwyck so that, as his wife, she won't be able to testify against him, matters come to a crisis. In a whirlwind climax the girl and the professors outwit the public enemies and bring things to a satisfactory ending in one last hectic mixture of suspense and hilarity.

Seven noted character actors play the various professors. They are Oscar Homolka, Henry Travers, S. Z. Sakall, Truly Marshall, Leonid Kinskey, Richard Haydn and Aubrey Mather. Dana Andrews portrays the gangster with Dan Ruryea and Ralph Peters cast as his aides, while Allen Jenkins portrays a garbage man and Kathleen Howard the professors' house-keeper.
