Rules Governing the Carriers' Contest.

In last week's issue of the Dispatch we announced that the rules and regulations governing the rural carriers' contest would be promulgated later. The following rules will decide the contest. All carriers who entered the contest are to state in their next list of items whose article in their opinion was the best. And the carrier who then receives the most votes wins the first prize, and the one who gets the se cond largest wins the second prize. In this way the carriers will be their own judge and no one can complain if he fails to win a prize.

A City Beautiful.

What Burlington needs most of all just now is a civic league, who will take immediate steps to have the city cleaned up and beautified. Nearly all towns of any importance have such organizations, and they are doing a power of good. tional system unless the heart and soul of system is to have some nourshment. A finely adorned head is not necessarily a sign of a sound wholesome body. The public schools of North Carolina are the hope of nine tenths of the children,-these schools form the heart and the soul of our educational life.

Gentlemen of the Legislature you have heard eloquent pleas from the heads of these State schools, but you have heard no pleas from the representatives of the thousands of little toe-headed bovs and girls in the hedges and by ways of this State. It is for these little ones and for the thousands of young men and women who will never enter the halls of our great State schools that we Look out, gentlemen, of the Legislature for the heart and soul of our educational body. See that the feet of this body are well provided with shoes, as well as adornment of the head. We have no objection to improving the head, but we must insist that our educational body is not all head, if it is, then it is not a natural body, and will sooner or later die and go the way of all the ceipt for subscription for The State Dispatch

Whitesell, when Miss Sophronia were mentioned last week, returned Alice, and Mr. John H. Dixon were happily united in the holy bonds of wedlock. Rev. F. M Harr performed the ceremony.

Immediately after the ceremony the guests were invited to the dining room where a delicious and sumptuous dinner was a waiting lhem. It would be putting it mildly to say that all enjoyed this splendid fare. 🤏

Even though the weather was extremely rough there were many guests present besides near relatives. The bride received many presents which show appreciation.

The bride and groom with several guests spent the night and were hailed by serenaders that made things lively for about two hours.

Mr. and Mrs. Dixon left on the 10:30 train Wednesday morning for Grimesland, N. C., where they will make their future home.
