MEETS DEATH AT HANDS OF HIS SON

Richmond, Va., March 28. — James Currie, aged fifty-seven years, a well known engineer, employed for some time at the Richmond Cedar Works, lies dead at the undertaking establishment of Arthur C. Nelsen, in Fulton, and his fifteen-year-old son, Robert is a prisoner at the First police station charged with the slaying of his father. While there is no denial of the shooting, nor anything that would lead to believe the boy fired in self-defence, Coroner Taylor, will at 10:30 o'clock this morning hold an inquest in his office in the city hall.

The incidents that led up to the killing, as learned last night, were these: The elder Currie upon arriving home from his place of employment, shortly after 6 o'clock yesterday evening, and looking over the food prepared for supper by Mrs. Currie, complained of its quality and quantity. This led to a reply Mrs. Currie, and more heated words fell from the lips of Currie, who it was said had grown fierce in his anger. He seized his wife, and it was said by members of the family began to beat her.

Just at that time the boy, Robert, arrived upon the scene. He had just left his place of employment, too, and was ready for his supper. He worked as an apprentice at the printing office of John W. Fergusson, and was considered a mild mannered youth.

Upon going into the room where his father was belaboring his mother, the boy grew frantic. He ran to an adjoining room, seized a big Swiss rifle, which had been in the family for years, raised it and fired. The bullet, a forty-one, struck the elder Currie in the right side of his neck, piercing the jugular vein.

He fell over to the table, clutched at a chair, dropped to the floor and almost immediately expired. The report of the gun, together with the screams of Mrs. Currie and the cries of several of the smaller children, a great crowd of people—neighbors, and those who were passing on their way home from the various shops and factories in the neighborhood.

Bicycle Officer Matt and Policemen Samuels and Maloney arrived on the scene.

There lay the dead father, blood flowing from the awful wound in his neck, while calmly, almost pathetically, stood the youth who had in his love for his mother sought to stay the hand of the father even to killing him. The youngster made no resistance. He accompanied the officer to the station, where he was lodged in one of the upper rooms, where later he declined to talk to any one, expressing the wish to be left alone.

"I will not talk with any one tonight," he said. "In the morning I may talk, but let me alone now. I want to sleep."

So he was allowed to sleep, or at least, he was left alone. The Currie family is a large one. There are nine children, three girls and six boys. The youngest is four years old; the elder in the twenties.

Mr. Currie was not considered a man of bad habits, nor had any of his acquaintance credited him with a taint of heartlessness. He was not a drinking man, nor, so far as the outside world knew, had he made it a habit of assaulting his wife. In a word, the family, from all appearances, seemed to be as happy as any in similar circumstances, and hence it is hard for those who know the Curries to believe that the family could have been so suddenly and tragically sundered.

The boy was not a wild youngster as that term is generally applied. He was looked upon rather as something of a model for other lads look up to. He worked and helped take care of the large family, and was generally presumed to be something of a comfort to his mother.

trial education that shall reach the entire working class. Far-sighted German statesmen and economists have realized the fact that it educates only the men at the top and neglects the masses. Germany spends as much, if not more, than we do on higher education; but it lays an equal stress upon the scientific training of the average man—the working man. In Germany vocational training is compulsory; for, although the boy may leave the regular school at fourteen, he is compelled, in most of the German states, to go to a continuation school for from two to four years longer. The hours for this supplementary schooling vary in different localities—from four to six in the afternoon, or two mornings a week, or one day a week, as the case may be; but the boy must go to school, and it is the duty of his employer to see that he does so. If he attends an evening school, the employer is compelled to allow him a certain number of hours each day away from his work. These continuation schools, although the most important factor in the training not only of boys, but of men and women, for their vocations, are only one ramification of an unparalleled system of industrial education.

Here in America we have directed our efforts toward the perfecting of machinery, leaving the human being, the most important and costly factor in production, to pick up his training as best he might. Our higher institutions of learning and our admirable schools of technology turn out trained and efficient organizers of labor; but these generalists have to deal with a raw and undisciplined army. Meanwhile, from all parts of our country comes a demand for skilled labor that is not met by the supply; and we import European workmen trained to a higher standard of skill than our own. One of our great national failures is a lack of thoroughness—and the time is fast coming when, if we mean to hold our own, we can no longer be slipshod. We, too, must educate our workers.

Hard Tussle With a Mink

(Bakersville Chronicle)
Our Bandana correspondent says, "Rose Ellis, Stocks, Johnson and Frazier Willis were hunting near Ledger Thursday morning and found a mink track in the snow. They followed the track three or four miles, finding the animal denned in a rock cliff back of the Gouge mountain. They smoked it out, and when the mink appeared Ellis caught it and the animal got his finger in its mouth and he could not turn loose, but had to fight. He continued choking the mink until it was dead, and still his finger could not be released until its mouth was prized open with a nail. When the fight was over Ellis was as bloody as a bull pup at a bear fight. Dr. D. J. Gouge gave them $4. for the hide."

Terrible Picture of Suffering

Clinton, Ky.—Mrs. M. C. Mc Elroy, in a letter from Clinton, writes: "For six years, I was a sufferer from female troubles. I could not eat, and could not stand on my feet, without suffering great pain. I had lost hope. After using Cardui a week, I began to improve. Now I feel better than in six years." Fifty years of success in actual practice, is positive proof, furnished by those who have used it, that Cardui can always be relied on for relieving female weakness and disease. Try Cardui, today, now!

LOST APPETITE AND HOPE

Neglected Cold Caused Complication, Promptly Restored by Feruna.

Mrs. Rosa Boyer.
"I thank Feruna for new life and strength. I send you two pictures, so you can see what Feruna has done for me."

Mrs. Rosa Boyer, 1421 Sherman Ave., Evanston, Ill., writes: "If any one has reason to praise Feruna it is surely myself. 'Last spring I became so run down from the serious effects of a lingering cold, that several complications united in pulling me down. I could neither eat nor sleep well, and lost flesh and spirit. I finally tried Feruna and it did wonders for me. In two weeks I was like another person, and in a month I felt better than I ever had before. 'I thank Feruna for new life and strength. I send you two pictures, so you can see what Feruna has done for me.'"

Caught in a Rain.

Douglasville, Tex. — "Five years ago I was caught in the rain at the wrong time," writes Edna Rutherford, of Douglasville, "and from that time, was taken with dumb chills and fevers, and suffered more than I can tell. I tried everything that I thought would help, and had four doctors, but got no relief. I took Cardui, the woman's tonic. Now, I feel better than in many months." Cardui does one thing and does it well. That's the secret of its 50 years of success. Try Cardui.

Paint Lick Sick Lady

Paint Lick, Ky.—Mrs. Mary Freeman, of this place, says: "Before I commenced to take Cardui, I suffered so much from womanly trouble, I was so weak that I was down on my back nearly all the time. Cardui has done me more good than any medicine I ever took in my life." You need not be afraid to take Cardui. It is no new experiment. Composed of gentle-acting, herb ingredients, it has been found to safely relieve headache, backache and similar female troubles. Try it for your troubles.
