Governor Craig Will Call Special Term of Legislature.

Governor Lock Craig has recently given out the report that a special term of legislature will be called to consider the freight question as it affects the state.

He said: There will be a special session of the legislature. That has been contemplated ever since the last session of the general assembly, and I will certainly take any proper action that may be necessary to secure for North Carolina fair treatment by the railroads. The people are determined that they will no longer suffer the injustice to which they have been subjected for years in the matter of freight rates, and I will do all in my power to aid them in this contest. With fair treatment the cities and towns of North Carolina would grow and prosper, and we are going to have that treatment before long."

Carolina Business College Opens.

The Carolina Business College which began actual work in their school over Holt-Cates Store have enrolled a large number of students and are enrolling new ones daily. That this is a good opportunity to take a business course appears to be the opinion of the many boys and girls of the town who have and are expecting to enroll. That it is unnecessary to go away to a business school where you will have to pay a high price for board when you can take a course just the same and just as good at home appears to be the chief pulling point. Several students from other places have already arrived here and will enlist and take the course. Many of the boys and girls who have to work during the day are arrangements to take the course at night.

Little negro boy by the name of King ruler was arrested Monday evening charged with stealing $26.02 from Mr. C. T. Huggins of east Burlington.

The play is a comedy, and has been given in all of the largest towns in the State, and has taken well wherever given.

It will be given by local talent entirely, and the proceeds are to go to the Civic League. Look for further notice next week.

Progressive News From Washington.

Munsey Building, Washington, D. C. June 7, 1913.

The Kansas Republicans have at last held the "great hasmony meeting" for they have been preparing with much advertisement during the last two or three months. It was a formal effect on the part of the standpatters to toll ex-Republican Progressive back to the old organization. The lists of Kansas leaders present and absent show, by their sharp contrast, the exact measure of success attained.

Among those who attend were Dave Mulvane, the standpatter member of the Republican National Committee, who helped materially to accomplish the great fraud at the Republican National Convention last year; Chester I. Long, the standpatter ex-Senator; Charles F. Scott, the standpatter ex-Congressman; Dan Anthony, the standpatter Congressman, Mort Albaugh and George Clark, head of the Republican League that last fall advised all Republicans to vote against all Progressive candidates. These were the men who were engineering the meeting.

Those who were not there included Senator J. L. Bristow, former Governor stubbs, Congressman Murdock, Progressive leader of the House; Sheffield Ingallons; William Ailen White; Henry J. Allen and a score or more other first class fighting Progressive leaders.

Another prominent leader of the State who was not present was J. N. Dolley who, instead of attending, sent his resignation as Chairman of the Republican State Committee, an act which was foreshadowed some days ago by his public announcement that he had joined the Progressives.

It was a regulation old-fashioned standpatter Republican meeting. A carefully hand-picked committee on resolution submitted a platform of glittering generalities vigorously asserting the progressiveness of the Republican party, without a line to explain in what particular the assertion was true. A few of the delegates who would really like to see the Republican party do something to make good its bluff of progressiveness, had the temerity to try to get the resolutions committee to write into the platform some words of encouragement concerning the minimum wage, workmen's compensation, widow's pensions, 9-hour day for working women, recall of decisions, and similar items, of social and industrial justice. This standpatters, however, promptly suppressed them and the best they could obtain was a feeble endorsement of a makeshift form of initiative and referendum. Even that was fought bitterly by Charles F. Scott, who threatened to take his fight to the floor of the meeting. The other standpatters, however persuaded Mr. Scott to absent himself from the meeting rather than make that fight, and so the conference finished with the outward appearance of harmony. Not a single thing was accomplished to induce any Progressive State to go back to the Republican.

The standpatters had tried to make it appear that Progressives were attending their meeting by electing delegates in pairs, one standpatters and one Progressive from a district, but the Progressives so chosen saw through the tactics and did not accept their unsought and undesired delegations.

A new turn has been given to the Senate investigation of President Wilson's charge that a great lobby was at work on the tariff bill and the investigating committee has now been instructed to inquire into the charged that the President himself has exerted pressure upon Senators to induce them to support the bill as the Administration wants it. An investigation of this kind, if conscientiously made, ought to produce some extremely interesting information. Washington has never seen a more adroit or vigorous use of White House pressure in support of an Administration measure. When the tariff bill was in the Democratic caucus in the House, Mr. Underwood, the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, frankly admitted that certain most important provisions had been drawn in deference to the wishes of the President and that admission on his part prevented a change of those provisions by the caucus. It is not likely, however, that the new turn of the investigation will produce any startling results, despite the moral certainty of certain Senators and others in Washington as the means employed by the President in exerting pressure upon Congressmen. Mr. Wilson is much more skillful than was Mr. Taft and there is no practical likelihood that a "Norton letter" will be extracted from this Administration by a Senate Committee.

Now that the Senator Committee investigating President Wilson's charge about the existence of a tariff lobby has been instructed to inquire into the President's own activities in forcing through this legislation, a very interesting line of inquiry may be opened. An opportunity is afforded at once to learn the truth as to certain reports which have been in circulation in Washington concerning the relations between the President and Senator Thompson of Kansas. Mr. Thompson was said to be concerned about the welfare of the best sugar concern at Garden City, Kansas, where he lives, and it was reported that he was inclined to oppose the tariff bill reducing the duty on sugar. About that time, Henderson Martin, the Democratic State Chairman of Kansas, came to Washington for the purpose, as he announced, of "cutting the pie." Mr. Martin saw the President and subsequently announced that a certain appointment would be made in Wichita, Senator Thompson, as the story goes, was opposed to this appointment and wrote a note to the President expressing his feelings. It is reported that the President promptly replied, expressing his surprise and asking Mr. Thompson to come to see him. Mr. Thompson did go to the White House and thereafter it was announced that the Wichita appointment would not be made.

Recently, Thomas W. Morgan, of Ottawa, Kansas, was appointed Worden of the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth. This is regarded in Washington as a personal victory for Senator Thompson who had unsuccessfully recommended Morgan's appointment of Attorney-General McReynolds. The job is considered one of the juiciest political plums in the west.

Now it is reported that Senator Thompson is prepared to support the Administration at all points on the tariff bill and has no further thought of fight free sugar. This attitude may have nothing to do, of course, with these patronage matters and that is one of the things which the new line of investigation may determine.

Bird Dogs Kill Nineteen Chickens

For Walter Mebane.

Mr. Walter Mebane was rather unpleasantly surprised this morning when he awoke from his peaceful slumbers and found twelve of his fine large hens and seven nice frying sized dead in the yard and as he rushed to the door saw two bird dogs belonging to messers E. L. Morgan and L. E. Atwater go rushing away at full speed. The dogs had great sport in catching and killing each chicken as it flew from the roost. One morning last week Mr. Mebane lost three in this same manner.
