R. J. REYNOLDS ON NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING.

Mr. R. J. Reynolds, of Winston-Salem, is recognized as being one of the most successful business men in the South today. He is known far and wide as the tobacco king of the Twin City. Mr. Reynolds recently made the statement that the newspapers are the standard forms of advertising, and correct mediums through which to reach the people. Mr. Reynolds had this to say about newspaper advertising:

"I believe that a manufacturer who has a good product with which he can make a popular appeal, and will tell the truth about it in the daily papers, backed with a good selling organization, will make an unqualified success. I have had ample experience with this form of advertising to prove, beyond any doubt, that newspapers are, unquestionably the standard form of advertising.

"When you consider the number of newspapers that daily go into the millions of homes and how dependent we all are upon them for the world's news, it would be hard to depreciate their value as an advertising medium. After all, it is a simple matter of manufacturing a good article—and letting the people know the truth about it. "Yes, newspapers are good advertising mediums, or this company would have found it out before it began investing hundreds of thousands of dollars in their columns annually. "This company thought enough of advertising as a selling medium not to retrench on expenses in this division of the business when the European war broke out. As a matter of fact, more was appropriated of advertising than we would have otherwise expended. As a result, we are doing the largest business in our history."
