HOME AGAIN.

Charles E. Cross and Samuel C. White, the absconding president and cashier of the State National Bank, of Raleigh, had arrived home in custody of Chief of Police Rogers and Deputy Rogers.

They were driven quietly to the jail. Very few people were on the lookout, as it had been announced that Cross and White would not arrive until later in the day.

On their arrival at the jail the prisoners were locked up. They were permitted to see a few relatives. Three brothers-in-law of White and two of his childhood friends called. The one of the latter White said that amidst all his troubles he had not lost his religion. He was told that a week ago his Sunday school class of young ladies had prayed for him.

There was no trouble whatever in bringing the prisoners back. They did not make any resistance, and they agreed to a compromise which they agreed to return. This was all wrongly stated.
