DAN MITCHELL'S CLOSE CALL

if It Did Not Cure His Haldness Before Dan Mitchell, one of the best known men in northwestern Pennsyl vania, was appointed captain of police We keep watching your columns in Erie, he was a resident of the oil eountry. While prospecting for peadventure with a rattlesnake in Venango led him to remove to Erie, where there are no venemous serpents, it being a peculiarity of Erle county that a rattler was never seen on the slope between the highest elevation and the lake. All the rattlesnakes are on the southern slope of the watershed.

Mr. Mitchell had to go on foot through a wild part of Venango, his horse having been stolen the night before: The keeper of the little log hotel from which he started warned him to look out for snakes, and he took the precaution to encase his legs Miss Ivey D. Herring is absent in thick leather boots that were supposed to be fang proof. It was extremely hot, and Mr. Mitchell's clothing was wet with perspiration after an hour's crowding through the tangle of bushes and climbing over rocks. ing around the hill he found a spring Mrs. Sabry Herring, who recently boiling from under a ledge of stone. It was surrounded by a fringe of bushes, through which there was an opening just large enough for the admission of a man's head. Mr. Mitchell was so tired and heated that he had no thought of snakes, and he thrust his head into the hole. When he had cooled his face and quenched his thirst at the spring he resumed his walk with a sigh of satisfaction. He had hardly turned the corner of a projecting bowlder as large as a cabin when he heard a frightful scream. Going back, he saw a hor-rible sight. A peddler had stopped for a drink as had Mr. Mitchell. When his lips touched the water a great rattlesnake buried its fangs in the man's neck. As he jerked himself out of the reptile's lurking place he dragged the snake with him. In an instant he realized that he was doomed, as the poison was being carried through his body more swiftly because the venom had entered near the jugular vein. As Mr. Mitchell came in sight the peddler was shrieking and praying. The snake remained at the edge of the spring, as further intrusion, and, catching sight of it, the peddler shouted:

"Curse you! I'll kill you before I He grasped the snake as he spoke and received a second bite on the hand. In his frenzy he tore the snake asunder, ground the head beneath his heel, and fell to the ground.

The scene described had not occupied two minutes. Mr. Mitchell was at his side as quickly as possible, and held a whiskey flask to the mouth of prostrate man, whose body was already beginning to swell. The liquor did no good. In five minutes the peddler was dead, so quickly had NEW GOODS AT B. F. The body of this snake is no larger than a very small knitting needle, yet it is fifteen inches long. It seems to be a very lively snake and is coiled around some plants in a jar of water. The movements of the little fellow, and the fact that it remains most of time under water, would indicate that it is a variety of water serpent .- Pittsburg Dispatch.

If half of what the inventors of the phonograph claim for it comes true, ldren of the near future are going to have some wonderful toys. Inventors are now at work on a long list of nursery wonders, in all of which the new mechanism is to be the main feature. The phonographic doll will talk, laugh, cry and sing like a hu-man being. Noah's ark will contain a drove of neighing, braying, roaring, lowing, barking, mewing, hissing, cackling creatures that will rival a menagerie. The song notes of fine singing birds have been preserved on metal slips and the results combined so that one may have a papier mache canary which will require no attention and will sing with many times the volume, and at many times the length, of any bird that ever lived. Mothers, too, have the promise of a phonographic cradle, at the head of which the wonderful mechanism is community is alive with pretty girls.
