NEW BARBER SHOP. When you wish an easy shave, As good as better ever gave, Just call on me at my saloon. At morning, eve or noon; I cut and dress the hair with grace, To suit the contour of the face. My room is neat and towels clean, Scissors sharp and razors keen. And everything I think you'll find; To suit the face and please the mind. And all my art and skill can do If you just call, I'll do for you. PAUL SHEPARD, The Clinton Barber.

DRUNKENNESS—LIQUOR HABIT—Is all the World's Shame. Dr. Haines' Golden Specific. It can be given in a cup of tea or coffee without any special preparation. It is a powerful and pleasant medicine, and is the only one of its kind that has been found to cure the habit of drinking. It is a powerful and pleasant medicine, and is the only one of its kind that has been found to cure the habit of drinking. THE CAUCASIAN.

LINTON, N. C.,—JAN. 30, 1890.

THE UNIVERSITY. Properly Declared to be the Head of the Public School System. Mr. Chas. D. Melver lectured at the University of North Carolina, in the Chapel Thursday night January 16th, before a large and once on Public Education. He went outside of the cut and dried speech on this subject—often heard and told facts with which our most intelligent men are too little familiar. He defined the close relationship between the University of the State and our public schools, they belong to the same system and are supported in the same way. And not until our public schools are better will our colleges be filled with students, because, although we have a good number of preparatory schools, the large majority of children can take only a year at most, only a year at them before going to college on account of lack of means, and if the public schools fail to prepare them this far, they must stay at home. Hence we often hear boys say: "I could go to college if I could get prepared."

Wants to Speak a Good Word. After suffering untold agonies for three years from rheumatism, and after trying various remedies without effect, I decided to try S. S. S. After taking 8 bottles I was entirely cured. Therefore I cheerfully add mine to the many testimonials which go to prove the great success of S. S. S. as a remedy for those suffering from rheumatism.

JOHN McDONALD, McDonald's Mill, Georgia. The following extract is taken from a letter received from Mr. William McKain, proprietor of the Madison Home, at Tallulah, Madison Parish, La.: "While I was merchandising at Milliken's Bend, in this parish during the year 1887 and '88, I sold large quantities of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.), and during that time every one that used the medicine was cured in its praise. Among those who were benefited by S. S. S. was a man—since dead—who had a cancer in its most malignant form. He had spent a small fortune in trying to effect a cure, but without success. After the knife had been used there was still a cancerous taint left in his blood, the wound never healing. I finally persuaded him to try S. S. S., and it alone eradicated the cancer, and he recovered perfect health. From that time until his death, which was several years, a symptom of the disease never returned."

Not a Symptom in Five Years. Had scrofula in 1884 and entirely cured it from my system by taking seven bottles of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.). I have not had any symptoms of it since that time. C. W. WILCOX, Spartanburg, South Carolina. Treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free. SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Drawer 3, Atlanta, Georgia.

RAILROAD NOTES. One durable, well-made, handsomely finished box-car a day—besides the other work incident to a great line of travel and traffic—is the output of the work-shops of the Cape Fear & Yadkin Valley Railroad at the present time. There are also under the shed several passenger cars which have been recently turned out, repainted, renovated and made comfortable for the increased through travel which may be expected within the next thirty days.—Fayetteville Observer.

Inherited Blood Poison. How many people there are whose distress from sores, aches, pains and eruptive tendencies are due to inherited blood poison. But blood passes from parent to child, and it therefore is the duty of a husband to keep his blood pure. This is easily accomplished by a timely use of B. B. B. (Bottanic Blood Balm). A book of most convincing proof and finally cured completely. Mrs. S. M. Williams, Sandy, Texas, writes: "My three poor afflicted children, who inherited blood poison, have in proved rapidly after use of B. B. B. is a Godsend!" J. R. Wilson, Glen Alpine Station, N. C., Feb. 13, 1885, writes: "Bone and blood poison forced me to have my leg amputated, and on the stump there came a large ulcer, which grew worse every day until doctors gave me up to die. I only weighed 120 pounds when I began to take B. B. B., and 120 lbs. less in six months and well. I never knew what good health was before."

JUDGE LYNCH'S RECORD.—It is stated that in the United States last year there were 98 legal executions, and that Judge Lynch presided over 175 executions. This is a terrible record.—State Chronicle.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve. The Best Salve in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Felted Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Corns, and all Skin Eruptions, and positively cures them, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Dr. R. H. HOLLOMAN.

Ringling Noises. In the ears, sometimes a roaring buzzing sound is caused by catarrh, that exceedingly disagreeable and very common disease. Loss of smell or hearing also result from catarrh. Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier, is a peculiarly effective remedy for this disease, which it cures by purifying the blood. If you suffer from catarrh, try Hood's Sarsaparilla, the peculiar medicine.

THE NEW YORK SHOP GIRL.

Great Improvements in Her Condition During Recent Years. It will be remembered that about eight years ago there was a popular demand upon the storekeepers that their women clerks should be treated more like human beings than as mere automata, that they should be given seats behind the counters on which they could rest themselves, and that they should have some apartment wherein they could retire and secure occasional rest from the constant strain upon their nerves and their bodies. The general clamor for reform in this direction led to a most marked improvement in the way in which these young women were treated. The change came slowly, but it came at last, and now the proprietors of the great stores have made admirable provisions for the comfort of their employees.

It may have been observed by shoppers that there is a marked improvement in the personnel of the girls employed in the big stores. Purchasers are treated with more courtesy, and the interest in the purchaser so manifest sometimes as to be almost amusing to persons who have been in the habit of shopping in other cities. This is based upon very sound financial reasons. Several of the big shops have entered into an agreement with their employees to give them a certain percentage on their total daily, weekly or monthly sales, small as it is, in each sale, but in the aggregate a very handsome addition to their salaries. The result of this is a decided eagerness on the part of the clerks to wait upon the customers and an anxiety that they shall be pleased. This is an improvement founded upon the interest of both employer and employee, and gives the latter an interest in their work which deprives it of much of its tedium.

The question of seats in the stores has been always an important one because of the necessity for room in the aisles between the counters and the confined space within which the clerks are obliged to work. But an ingenious inventor solved the problem by providing a queer little stool, which resembles the one which is so familiarly known to many respects, though more solid and comfortable. This in many stores is placed to the lower part of the counter, and the rules of the store permit any clerk when she is not actually engaged in a sale to use these stools at will. As most of the shopping is done between 11 a. m. and 4 p. m., this would seem to give the clerks five full hours during which there is little chance for rest, but this is obviated in this way: The clerks in each department are divided into what on shipboard would be known as "watches." During the busy hours of a department where there are fifteen clerks not more than twelve are, with few exceptions, behind the counter at one time. But these twelve are understood to do the full work of the fifteen, so that in hourly or fifteen minute intervals they may in turn have a rest. Formerly the clerks were compelled to get a bite to eat whenever they could between the customer's demands. Now, however, things are changed so that each girl or set of girls has a half hour in which they may eat their meals in quiet. Not only this, but in the big stores a room is provided for them with tables and condiments where they have almost as many comforts as they would have at home. These rooms are usually in the basement, and the clerks are compelled as a rule to utilize every bit of space above ground that they can secure, but they are kept clean and comfortable by the women who also care for the cleanliness of the main floor. There is, however, one exception, in great store in Fourteenth street, in which the clerks are not obliged to go to the basement to eat their lunches. Here they are given a big apartment upstairs, where they have all the fresh air they desire, and also the opportunity to obtain warm food from the adjacent restaurant.

So far as the accommodations for storing wraps and any little valuables which the clerks may have some desire to keep in safety while they are attending to the customers are provided in most stores but they are provided in these things may be kept under lock and key, and which answer at the same time as dressing rooms, where the clerks may keep a store dress, and in the morning change their street costume for it, to a very manifest saving of the latter. The routine of the employment of persons in the great stores is based to a great extent upon civil service principles. The department chief is selected because of his or her peculiar fitness for the position. But none of these vice regents of the proprietor is given power of dismissal over an employe who has been more than a year in the store. Each one of these has the right to be heard, and if the excuses are satisfactory the person concerned is not discharged. Another thing that goes far toward making the shop-girls contented with their lot is that in several of the stores their wages are yearly increased in proportion to their time of service.—New York Times.

A Chemical Ballet. At a banquet which was given at the conclusion of the German congress of naturalists and physicians at Cologne, Dr. Hoffman alluded to the difficulty experienced by students in understanding the constitution of organic compounds, and suggested an original method of fixing these in their minds. The audience was then treated to a ballet in which the dancers were dressed in different colors to represent the various atoms. At his command these colored female atoms grouped themselves in various fashions to show the chemical constitution of particular compounds and their reactions. The composition of benzole, and the formation of aniline and its derivatives, were particularly applauded. The ballet wound up by a representation of the formula for the new explosive—the finale being a formidable explosion.—Annals of Hygiene.

A Good Boy. "Been around town any, sir?" asked a Detroit and Milwaukee depot the other day. "No, bub, I haven't," was the reply. "Shan't I call a carriage for you?" "No, I've no money to pay for such luxuries."

"Can't blow in $2?" "Humph! That's too bad. If I only had a key to the police box I'd ring for the patrol wagon and let you have a ride and see some of the business streets for nothing."—Detroit Free Press.

Artificial Diamonds. The diamond trade is much interested in the remarkable artificial diamonds which came into notice during the Paris exposition. So perfect are some of the imitations that they puzzle dealers and experts. By the same chemical analysis as applied to precious stones they are found to melt at only a very high degree of heat, and, of course, were exceedingly hard—in fact, so hard that they would scratch and almost cut mirror glass.—Scraps Journal.

A FRENCH DUDE FISHING.

The Gallie Idea of Sport Typified in a Parisian Fisherman. I shall never forget a fellow I saw one day last summer, just outside of Paris, fishing in the Seine. To preclude the laws are very strict over there in regard to fishing and shooting. The seasons open and shut like a jack knife with a snap, and woe to the transgressor. On a certain day in July, I think, the season opens, and long before daylight the way the banks of the river all along the Bois de Boulogne are lined with fishermen sitting side by side, almost elbow to elbow. I strolled down to the river one day and witnessed the sport. Taking out a cigar I paid a woman two sous for a chair, and sat down to get a wrinkle in French fishing. For half an hour all sat in silence with not a movement. Presently one fellow had a nibble. Immediately every eye was turned on the little red float on his line. The float moved perceptibly. The man, with every nerve strained and eyes riveted on the float, was motionless with excitement, watched. The float dipped again. The man pulled, and the cork came to the surface, but no fish. All along the line of fishermen there was an ejaculation of "Ah!" The disappointed fisherman put on a fresh piece of bait and waited. Presently the fish took hold again, and this time he had him. Carefully he worked him in to the bank, and an attendant slipped a delicate landing net under the fish and carried him up the bank. There was a cry all along the line of fifty or more fishermen of "Bon, bon, troisi!" Several had their rods and gathered around the basket, lined with leaves, in which the fish was carefully placed. He was a monster, nearly six inches long, and must have weighed about ten ounces. Then all went at it again with renewed hope and courage.

Presently a cab drove up and there descended from it a dude in an elaborate sporting costume, with a broad brimmed hat. Walking leisurely to the bank, a man who had evidently been sent ahead to secure a position vacated. A servant brought from the cab a folding stool, and placed it on the bank; returning to the cab he produced a delicate rod and satchel. The rod was put together, the satchel was opened and a small silver bait box, a towel, a piece of soap and a bowl were placed on another stool alongside.

The servant opened an umbrella and held it over the fisherman's head to screen him from the sun and the fish began. It was a long wait for a bite. Finally there was a nibble and miss; several more nibbles and misses, and presently there was a fish, sure enough. The excitement all along the bank was intense. With the aid of the landing net the fish was secured. The servant essayed to take it off the hook, but the fisherman anticipated him and held it up in triumph. But this operation was the dude's gloves, and he took them off and threw them away.

Things were getting interesting and exciting, and blank the expense. Presently another fish was secured, the servant dipped up water from the river and handed the dude the soap and towel; and he washed his hands. This was repeated every time he caught a fish. At this time a gentleman had been walking up and down, and approaching the lucky fisherman there followed an animated conversation with much gesticulating, a seemingly a protest against such indiscriminate slaughter.

The dude waxed indignant and quit. The servant unjoined the rod, gathered up the stools, umbrella and fishing basket and placed them in the cab, which had been waiting. The dude entered and was driven off with his catch, numbering about six, the aggregate weight of which might have been two pounds—an immense success. I have no doubt this great catch made an item in next morning's paper, with the usual lie about the weight of the string and the big one that was lost.

I had learned how the French do it. Evidently a little fishing goes a long way with a Frenchman. No doubt the man went out home, took a rose water bath and lay down for a rest after such a fatiguing and exciting episode. I thought to myself how I would like to get that chap out in the Rockies on a horn bush creek, of a hot day, and make him wade the stream, with an occasional stumble over a slippery bowlder and a sous under. What a power of good it would do him, and what fun for me!—Forest and Stream.

The Thumb Ring. It has taken a long while for the thumb ring to make any headway in New York, but it is very slowly gaining ground. Mr. Dixey was the first man to wear a ring upon his thumb, and he has clung to it tenaciously for two years. It is a plain gold band, worn just below the joint, and it was placed there at first merely as a mark. It excited so much talk among the people who knew the burlesque actor that he has refused to take the ring off and has worn it ever since. Actors always have a certain following among young men whose brains are not of dangerous weight and who are capable of devoting their energies to small things. The small things have the form of a thumb ring, and there is a very considerable portion of rather young men about town who are following Mr. Dixey's example.—New York Sun.

Business Is Business. Life Insurance Agent (out west)—What did Mr. Newcomer say? Assistant—He wouldn't talk with me at all; said he was too busy to think about life insurance. "Well, I'll hang around his house to-night and shoot holes through his windows, and when he comes down town in the morning you hide behind a fence in some vacant lot and put a few balls through the top of his hat. Then when he reaches his office I'll drop in and talk life insurance again."—New York Weekly.

Army Life Is Not an Easy One. The supposition that army life is an easy one is a civilian's delusion. No occupation on earth is more exacting. The soldier must be up and ready. Between reveille in the morning and "taps" at 9:30 at night, he has to attend to the majority of thirty-three bugle calls, and he is on his feet most of the time "retreat" at sunset. These officers are busy at nearly all times over new military problems. They are called to mount and manage new artillery that you have struck direct to the heart of the matter. Give us a Hannibal or Alexander. Today war is a science, requiring all the skill of the best navigators, the most able engineers and the finest electricians. All the known means of defense and destruction are availed of, even down to the last electric triumph, the telephone.—Baltimore American.

An Objection. "Mamma," said Harry, as he walked into the parlor with a rebellious air. "I ain't going to have light hair any more." "Why not?" asked his mother. "Cause it ain't useful. You can't wipe your pen on it 'bout its leaving streaks."—Merchant Traveler.
