A Buister Short at for a Seal. NEW ADVERTISEMENTS - NEW ADVERTISEMENTS One day last week Chus. Wolf, of Bath, was down the Kennebec in his SWEEPING float after ducks or shelldrake, and, , having spied one of the latter birds in the water near Lee's island, started for a shot. He had sculled almost within shot, and was anticipating securing the game when ping! came a rifle bullet REDUCTION! and struck the ice cakes on the bow of the float, the ice being used to deceive the birds. Had Mr. Wolf had a companion with him in the bow, the bullet would have struck his gun barrel as it lay over the front of the float. The hunter was somewhat disturbed by the shot, which he presumed was, of course, accidental, but continued sculling toward the shelldrake. In a minping ! came a second shot, this time directly over his head, and Wolf, glancing in the direction of the shot, discovered a man with a rifle on the Phipsburg shore. The rifleman was shooting purposely at the float. Immediately Wolf stood up in his boat and waved his hand at the shoot-
