AN ANCIENT MAN OF STRENGTH.

The Unequaled Peats Performed by a Ger man Showman in the Last Century. The first theatre manager of Berlin, Johann Karl von Eckenberg, was the so called "man of strength," who showed himself nearly 200 years ago, first as juggler, then as athlete. Of his life little is known except as in his career as theatre manager, as he was the founder of the first Berlin theatre. He was extensively written of, and an article under the title of "An Athlete of the Eighteenth Century," published some years ago and recently un-earthed, gives an interesting account of his prowess, as follows: By an athlete of the Eighteenth century we do not mean the Prince Fredof an ox with one stroke of his sword was the athlete Johann Karl von Eckenberg, who in the twenties and thirties of the last century showed his stitution, and will contain all town he called himself for a time, on of his great speeches, some of his bill posters, Sampson Hercules

ident Men May Forge to the Front, but They Often Fall When Forced to Speak. The silent man buildeth better than he knoweth. He acquires wealth, rep-utation and the odor of sanctity. His forte is keeping quiet. He is the orig-inal of the poet who said: "Silence is golden."

But Sir Boyle Roche, the author of that famous Irish bull about the man who put his foot in it every time he opened his mouth, plainly outlived the ultimate fate of the silent man. For that is the invariable fate of near ly all the men whose entire reputation rests on the rocky foundation of si-lence. Lucky he who has already achieved a competence on the strength

In nine cases out of ten he talks too much when he talks at all. He gives himself away, so to speak. He makes a braying donkey of himself; his reputation vanishes into thin air. Every fool!" And everybody goes complatory, the 1st of March, we have cently about his business, and the late of the silent man is sealed. Nobody can forgive him for once having made a fool of himself, because nobody can everybody else for many years.

And still the silent man waxeth fat and prosperous. He is one of the towers of strength in any community. When all the other men have had their little say, more or less eloquently and to the point, the silent man alone has not spoken. All eyes turn to him for refutation or confirmation of what has been said. But it is not his cue to he keeps his mouth shut. And every man about him thinks: What a superior man he is. However, as was remarked before there is generally a day when he is found out. To illustrate: Several years ago a young man went to the general office of one of our leading railroad companies in town. He was the bearer of strong letters of recommendation from an old friend of the manager in a small rural town. The letters referred especially heavy to the discretion-"unusual for his years"-of the young man, on his marvelous capac-ity for keeping his mouth shut. The manager, who had been on the lookout for just such a young man, at once gave him a berth in his private office. He prospered amazingly, for all that was required of him was to exercise Choice Goods (no old shop-worn goods) for his natural talent-keeping his mouth shut. The manager swore by him. Other men in the office caught the infection. Every clerk came to look upon Mr. Tytelipps—let us call him Tytelipps for short—as a phenomenon, as a model young man. Everybody marveled how this country bred young man had acquired so much wisdom. Thus Mr. Tytelipps rose, step by step, and his salary with him. One day he was inducted into a high and responsible position, commanding an almost princely remuneration. For a little while it was all right. He continued to keep his mouth shut.

But there was a turn in the tide. At a directors' meeting some information working of the department whose head Mr. Tytelipps had shortly be-come, was called for. Mr. Tytelipps' assistant, a man who had grown gray in the service of the company and who knew all the ins and outs of the de-partment to a T (but who had the misfortune to once in awhile talk too much), was sick at home. So Tytelipps himself had to respond. And when the questions had been fired at him and the board was waiting to be enlightened, Tytelipps shook his head sagely, coughed and hemmed and hawed. That "didn't go." He had to do some talking. Then the directors unanimously came to the conclusion that Tytelipps was a monumental ass and ought to be bounced. And he was bounced not long after. At least he was reduced to the ranks. But he couldn't stand this long. He went, and when last heard from he was ped-dling matches or apples or something. —Chicago Herald.

"Don't Wake Him." Forty years ago the leader of the New York bar was George Wood, whose grave deportment and habit of closing his eyes when in thought gave him an owlish appearance. One day a gentleman called on Dan-iel Webster, who had temporarily for saken politics and resumed the practice of law, to retain his services in a case involving a large sum of money.

Mr. Webster, in accepting the retainer, asked what counsel was to op-"Oh," answered the client, "he is some New York lawyer, with a com-monplace, every day name which I forget."

"What sort of a looking person is "Rather a sleepy looking man."
"Is his name George Wood?"

"Yes, that is his name." "Then," rejoined Mr. Webster, with emphasis, "don't wake him up!"-Youth's Companion.

"These boots should not only be com-These boots should not only be comfortable and easy to your feet," continued Mr. Trollope, "but they should be well made. Another very important thing to recollect is not to walk in darned socks. I started for Great St. Bernard and walked into Montiquy.
