There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by all Druggists, at 75 cents.

THE EDITOR'S CHAIR.

HOW THINGS LOOK FROM OUR STAND POINT.

The Opinion of The Editor and the Opinion of Others which we Can Endorse on the Various Topics of the Day.

As will be seen in another column, some of the railroads have signified to the Railroad Committee their willingness to waive their charter rights (?) of exemption for taxation and others are expected to follow. The State Press generally is applauding in advance this action of the corporations and speaking of their generosity, patriotism and sense of justice, etc. It is to be regretted that the spirit did not strike them sooner and to be wondered at that the laborer struggling to pay tax on his little hut has not long since risen to inquire in the justice and equity of such corporations, who more enjoy and more need the protection of the government, not paying a cent of the State's expenses. This may be patriotism and generosity, but we are inclined to believe that it is done to try to fight off a Commission. They prefer to pay tax to being investigated by a commission. Before another twelve months we will see what it means. Hope that we are mistaken.

The charter of the W. & W. Railroad as originally printed in the laws of the Legislature of 1831 is not punctuated like the manuscript of the same which is on file in the office of the Secretary of State. The Daily Chronicle of the 20th prints the two different readings and asks which did the Legislature intend to become a law.

The printed copy (of the part under controversy) reads: And the shares shall be deemed personal property and the property of said company; and the shares therein shall be exempt from ANY PUBLIC CHARGE OR TAX WHATSOEVER.

The manuscript copy reads: And the shares shall be deemed personal property, and the property of said company, and the shares therein shall be exempt from any public charge or tax whatsoever.

According to the latter reading all the property of said company would be subject to taxation; according to the first reading the shares only would be exempted. Which did the Legislature mean? The difference is a comma in the one case and a semi-colon in the other after the word "company," and on that punctuation point hangs a half million dollars, for the taxes of the road would have amounted to at least that amount since the granting of the charter.

Bully Reed and his conscientious gang are bent, it seems, to acquire a reputation that would make the ancient Goths and Vandals envious. Their whole course in the present Congress is so outlandish and antagonistic to a form of government like ours that we are at a loss for words to characterize their conduct. They have admitted and seated the Radical impostor Senators from Montana without a quorum vote, in the face of a Democratic majority and in the face of the certificate from the Governor that the Democratic Senators were elected.

They passed, with less than an hour's notice, not allowing discussion, the Judicial Bill, one of the most important measures since the foundation of the Government. It provides for the appointment of 18 new United States Circuit Judges, giving the President power to appoint them all of the same political party.

Thus our Judicial system was changed for partizan purposes, 18 new Judgeships created, and all done in an hour's time, without debate and with less than a quorum present, and now, to cap the climax, they have arranged a tariff bill that will place heavier burdens upon the agricultural class, and that too in the face of unprecedented agricultural depression, and in defiance of the Alliance's appeal for relief, and, unless death or the end of time prevents, they will rush it through regardless of consequences. We said this was the climax. We fear not. Tyrant Reed will dive again into his Pandora's box, bring up more devilry and oppression. Can such things continue under a representative government? Let the people speak in thunder tones of condemnation at the next ballot box!

INVESTIGATING RAILROADS. Looking into the Charters and the Workings of Corporations that Evade Payment of Taxes.

The legislative railroad and corporation investigation committee met in Raleigh on Tuesday last week. The members of the committee are State Senators E. W. Kerr, of Sampson, and B. F. Aycock, of Wayne, and Representatives M. E. Carter, of Buncombe; T. H. Sutton, of Cumberland, and J. B. Holman, of Iredell.

The committee was created and appointed by the last General Assembly with instructions to forthwith proceed to investigate the question of the liability of any railroad or other corporation, claiming immunity from taxation by virtue of any provision in its charter, to list and pay taxes upon its property, and to also investigate and ascertain what railroads or other corporations have failed and refused to list their stock and other property for taxation.

The committee was further ordered to report the testimony taken by them, and to report such legislation or other proceedings as in their opinion may be requisite to compel said companies to pay their lawful taxes. This committee has held one meeting previously at which a line of work was mapped out, and subpoenas were issued to the representatives of the Atlantic Coast Line and the Raleigh and Gaston railroad to appear before them at this meeting. Both of these roads have charters exempting them from taxation. The exemption in the charter of the Coast Line is absolute. That of the Raleigh and Gaston is conditional, because the provision is that the road shall pay tax to the amount of 25 cts. on each share of stock when its net earnings shall equal a eight per cent interest on the stock. The company made the claim that under this provision it is exempt, from taxation because the net earnings do not amount to that per centum per annum. But the investigations of the committee showed that the profits of the road have exceeded 8 per cent. and the fact that some of this profit has been used in making improvements and building branches does not by any means exempt the company from taxation.

Warren G. Elliot appeared before the committee and asked for the courtesy of 60 days to answer the demands of the committee, which was granted.

It is understood that at the end of this time he will come up and waive the exemption in the Company's charter and agree to enlist for taxation its three and a half million dollars worth of property in the State. The income to the State in this property alone would be over $100,000 per year. The committee will be in session all this week if not longer, and will issue subpoenas for the managers of Express Companies and other corporations to appear and be investigated.

TENDETH TO POVERTY. Solomon was wise beyond his times. It is not in reason to suppose that he had the modern newspaper in his mind when he wrote "There is that scattereth and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty;" but newspaper advertising just as surely as if it had been written in these latter days of the nineteenth century.—Durham Globe.

WOMAN'S SPHERE.

Washing and Ironing. It must be presumed that every housekeeper knows how this important work of the household should be done, and, therefore, any directions on the subject would be unnecessary. But this is an error, as there are now new and improved ways of washing which renders the work more easily done, and every housekeeper, even though it is not necessary for her to do her own washing, should understand the best method of doing the work in order to direct others.

The first that to be considered in the management of the laundry is to have proper utensils. The tubs should be clean and of the proper size. The washboard should be free from nails or broken places which might tear the clothes. The work bench should be firm and high enough to prevent fatigue in bending over the tubs. The water boiler should be kept clean and dry.

The clothes line, if not wire, should always be taken down after using, and clothes pins should be put in a bag or bucket kept for the purpose and put away.

Soft water is the best for washing. If a machine is used for washing it is best to soak the clothes over night in warm, soft water, to which should be added a tablespoonful of Pyle's Pearline to every gallon of water. Even when a machine is not used the soaking in this compound will be found to greatly facilitate the work, as it removes all stains and loosens the dirty spots.

When ready to wash, the clothes should be assorted—the fine separated from the coarse, the white from the colored. The water should be ready in the tubs as warm as the hands will bear. A tablespoonful of pearline added to every three or four gallons of water will whiten the clothes and render the use of less soap necessary. Clothes should not be boiled over five minutes, after which they should be put in a tub of cold water and the ends wrung out, when they may be rinsed in blue water and wrung out for the last time. The clothes that are to be starched should be put to themselves, and the others being hung out immediately. The starch should be as hot as the hand can bear, the articles dipped in, those needing to be very stiff first, then the starch may be thinned. After being starched, each article should be shaken free of wrinkles and hung securely on the line. When dry they should be removed to the clothes basket and smoothly folded, covered with a sheet, to remain until ready to sprinkle before ironing.

It is difficult to give minute directions how to iron well, but general rules for this work are laid down, and it is well for every housekeeper to understand them.

All garments, after being dried must be folded with care. To iron well, a strong table of suitable length should be provided, and a light ironing-board, also a bosom-board about eight inches wide and sixteen or eighteen inches long. Irons of three sizes, large medium and small, should be used, and always kept clean and smooth. Ashes, salt or wax rubbed occasionally on them will improve them very much.

It is best to begin with the sheets and table linen, akin the shirts next. First iron the shirt all over, wringing a clean cloth out of warm water and rub over bosom. Go over the bosom rapidly with a clean, hot iron; then dampen with water or polish and iron with a polishing iron.

Fine, soft articles that do not need polishing should be ironed on a fine sheet over a soft blanket. Embroideries should be ironed on the wrong side. Muslins and laces should be pulled out carefully, ironed over once and then pulled in shape; all edges should be picked out carefully and arranged to look new.

As far as possible ironing should be done by the thread of the goods, pulling the material straight and moving the iron in the same direction as the thread of the cloth.

A willing hand, by following these directions, will, after a little practice, and moderate difficulties and become efficient at the work.

PATRICIDE!

Startling Developments in the Butler Murder!

WAS THE DYING MAN'S DECLARATION UNTRUE? DID HE KNOWINGLY ACCUSE THE WRONG MAN?

THE SON ARRESTED FOR THE SHOCKING DEED!

What Was His Motive?—Did He Have an Accomplice?—The Mystery Yet Unfathomed.

Last week we gave the account of the assassination of Edw. N. Butler. His dying declaration implicated a desperate young man with whom he had had a difficulty. The officers have made search for the accused without success. In the meantime, little by little has been gathered and put together, a number of mysterious, contradictory and strange, but tell-tale facts that threw a strange suspicion on—horrible to relate—the murdered man's own son—Avery Butler, a lad of sixteen years.

The first clue to the first link in the chain of evidence against him was gotten when Dr. Stevens exhibited the death missile to blacksmith Wilson, who said that he recognized it as a piece very similar if not the same piece that Butler's son had picked up in the shop a few days before. The next clue was that Butler's own gun was found in the branch near where the murder was committed, and Butler's son was seen to take the gun from the house the morning of the murder.

The boy has been lodged in jail, his mother is prostrated with a double, an indescribable grief. The citizens are more shocked than ever at the turn things have taken.

LATER: The boy has admitted committing the horrible and unnatural deed. The crime is yet veiled in mystery. He refuses to say why he committed the crime, or whether he had an accomplice, but significantly remarks that people will be surprised when the story is told on the witness stand. The prisoner's attorney waives an examination.

A Forum of Public Opinion.

THE OPINION OF OUR READERS ON THE VARIOUS TOPICS OF THE DAY.

We offer this column to our readers in which to discuss topics of interest and profit to them.

Let The Nigger Go. A great deal is said and written about so many negroes leaving the State, and very few words of encouragement and very little inducement offered to the enterprising white young men to remain and assist in developing the different resources; 40,000 negroes can be easily spared and if the remainder would emigrate to return no more forever, in less than five years there would be plenty of available laborers. Capital would turn this way, and real estate would advance in price, and a general thrift would take place. There would not be such an enormous expense of feeding indigent negroes, that rarely earn more than their board, and commit more deprecations to make them a nuisance to the white race. May God speed the day when the last mother's son of them will leave this country. W. J. C.

"THE DREAM OF OUR FATHERS REALIZED."

Bad Weather Could not Dampen Wilmington's Hospitality to Her Guests.

Excursion to the Hammocks, Oyster Roast at Ocean View, the Banquet, Speech-Making and Good Cheer.

Notwithstanding last Thursday morning broke gloomy, cloudy and rainy, we could not resist the temptation to run down to Wilmington and see and enjoy the royal style in which we were sure she was entertaining her merchant guests. We are in Wilmington at that excellent hotel, the Orton. The office, reading and sitting rooms are crowded, and there we meet and shake hands with hosts of friends and acquaintances along the line of the new railroad. The excursion to the Hammocks is announced! The weather bureau is dealing out an old-fashioned "drizzly-drazzly rain," but again we cannot resist the temptation to go; and the crowded sea coast trains show that hundreds of others were moved by the same temptation. The trip is free and at the ocean side a hundred bushels of the delicious bivalves roasted and served on the half shell are ready and smoking hot to tempt the appetite of ye excursionist, and right royally did one and all do honor to the timely and sumptuous feast. Several hours were spent in strolling around the beach and Hammocks, and the decision of all was that if the place was more delightful in summer liveliness, that then they must come again at that time.

5:45 P. M. found us back in the hospitable city. At that hour the parade of the police and the Fire Department took place. After the parade, an alarm of fire was turned in from box 14, and an engine exhibition was given in front of The Orton in the presence of several thousand spectators. The Adams and Atlantic alternated in carrying their hose up on the ladder of the Wilmington Hook and Ladder Company, and altogether the display made was very fine.

The crowning feature of our delightful trip was yet to come. It was the grand and sumptuous banquet, given by the citizens of Wilmington, at night, in the large and spacious rear compartment of the warehouse of Champion Compresses; and it was a fitting close to one of the most delightful and important eras in the history of the North Carolina metropolis. The spread was laid under the direction of The Orton House, and was a delightful one in every respect. The hall was beautifully decorated with gay flags and bright streamers and brilliantly lighted by electricity. There were 10 tables. Each 100 ft in length and each adorned with beautiful flowers and evergreens. Among the decorations of the hall were the National colors of a dozen or more nationalities; the music stand was in one end of the hall, in the other was a rostrum on which were seated the distinguished speakers for the occasion. The tables were loaded with all the good things that the inner man could desire, and after that desire was even more than satisfied, the eloquent Hon. A. M. Waddell was introduced. After indulging for a few minutes in some timely and witty pleasantry, he said:

The people of Wilmington this evening are realizing the dreams of their fathers in the establishment of direct communication with that part of our State from which we have long been separated, and to the people of which our city has been and is but a name without significance. We do not wish this to continue. We greet you on this great occasion with our heart to our home. This great railroad, the completion of which we celebrate to-night and in which we rejoice, ought to have been the first railroad built in North Carolina, and I verily believe if that had been the case, the entire commercial and industrial establishment of this city would have been different from what it has been, and would have been more honorable to our civilization.

The talented J. H. Myrover of the Fayetteville Observer, delivered the response. Many other excellent speeches in response to the various toasts were made; that of Hon. C. M. Stedman being especially good. In short the whole thing was admirably arranged and was highly enjoyable. Wilmington has done the handsome thing, the anticipations of her guests more than realized, and she should be more than gratified with her success.

SAMPSON'S BILLIARD. Sorts of Feuds—Gossip—the State of Man. (Special Correspondent.) There are various sorts of feuds. There is the social feud, religious feuds, political feuds, and feud-al tenure. Then there is a small feud that operates in a more narrow compass. But it is entitled to all the respect, rights and privileges, to which the foregoing feuds might by any possibility be heir, either apparent, presumptive, in expectancy or reversion. You may tip your hat to it three times a day and smile every time you meet it. And when it gets too bold, you may take a back street, quit the public road, go through the woods, and ten to one you will meet him bluff to the face. Now his name is "Old family feud." He sits on juries, high up in the church, puts in an appearance at the poles on election days. You must speak when you meet him, or he gets mad, so he is mad any way. If you try to cool him off by boiling, and you feel like explaining, deliver us. A person who has fallen heir to old family feud, has got a vast estate on his hands, and he could well afford to be quite generous indeed, and they almost always are. They reckon up their estate at breakfast, make calculations until dinner, consider the cost of collection, until supper, and dream all night how to revive bad accounts, and every public day and court times they fling open their books for public inspection, to their own honor, and disgust of the community, in which they live. An heir of old family feud gets the whole estate. There is no cheating him out of it. For every way he turns he gets compound interest on the whole investment, and so; he gets such an accumulation of capital, that it becomes a serious question as to how he shall exhaust his wealth. He pours it in the ears of his lawyer, into the ears of his minister, into the ears of his wife, and a brail and a hate is the first lesson he has learned his children. He dreams over by day, he lies awake and nurses it half the night. He awakes in the morning to hug not a delusive fancy, but a stern reality. He is a legatee of old family feud. He is vexed at brother Tom, mad with sister Sue, hates uncle Joe, don't speak to his brother-in-law, and would not attend his father's funeral. By this time he has got so much business on hand, he quits the retail trade, and hangs on a wholesale sign: "feudo, feudi, feudere, feudum, feud." His fire is lit and left burning. "Then the endless trail is taken up by Mr. Telltale, Mrs. Tattler and Miss Gossip. They put their heads together to see how is the best plan to circulate a report, probably that is calculated to blast the character of a pure woman, and ruin the hopes of a good man, and throw society into confusion. Now don't you tell it, I went over to Mr. Soesoo to day, don't you breath this, and I heard lots, don't mention it, you know John Doe and Sallie Jinks, I would not have my name in it for this whole world. Dear me I don't know what is going to come next. What ever you do keep it to yourself. Then Miss Gossip will tell something or burst, and on it goes, soon it gets so like the wind, you can't tell "from whence it came or whither it goeth." If you kn w anything is worth, out with it and purge society. If you don't keep your tongue still and let it be clean.

Well a man has got a hard time in this world any way, when he is a little baby they put long dresses on him and near bout break his feet, keep him squalling all the time, then they say the baby is fretful, if you don't know what is to matter with him. Then they wait him full of soothing syrup, keep him stupified all the time, and you need not wonder at his not having any sense when he gets grown. They beat him and cuff him when he gets up a little size because he has played in the wet yard, and has caught the croop, and when he gets a little larger his father takes hold of him and slaps him side the head hard enough to "knock the taste out of his mouth," then he is started to school and the teacher scolds and beats him, when he gets grown he has a love scrape, finally marries, settles down to hard down misery, has a lucky suit or two, and if he is right lucky he dies, and the last state of that is better maybe than the first.
