THE EDITOR'S CHAIR.

HOW THINGS LOOK FROM OUR STAND POINT.

The Opinion of the Editor and the Opinion of Others which we Can Endorse on the Various Topics of the Day.

The Treasury comes to the relief of men who gamble in stocks and bet on craps, while Congress heaps more taxes on the men who pay for the transportation and those who raise and consume the crop.—N. Y. World.

When you hear a Republican blowing and blustering about the promises made in the last Republican National Platform and fulfilled by this Congress, just ask him how about the promised one cent letter postage? and see him squirm.

Every man who votes for a Republican Congressional nominee gives his endorsement to one man power as outrageously exemplified by the conduct of Speaker Reed. The question to be decided is, shall Congress legislate for the country or shall Thomas B. Reed alone do it, as he has during the present session of Congress?

The Congressional Apportionment bill, prepared by R. P. Porter, Superintendent of the Census Bureau, and introduced in the House by Representative Duncell chairman of the Census Committee, is as one-sided and unjust a measure as the Tariff bill. In it everything has been lost sight of but increasing the number of Republican votes in the House of Representatives and in the Electoral College, and to make it still more odious, the main features of the McComas, anti-so-called gerrymandering, bill was tacked on to it. This was done to prevent the Democrats from redistricting the States which the Republicans have in the past gerrymandered.

An extra session of Congress, whether obtained by the action of a majority of that body or by voting to take a recess, or called by Mr. Harrison, will be an outrage upon the tax-payers of the country. There is not the slightest excuse for an extra session in the war of legitimate public business, and were it not for the desperate condition of the Republican party it would never have been heard of. Its only business will be to pass the Force bill and other measures intended to assist the Republican party in retaining control of the Government; and the $6,000 a day, which it will cost, will have to be paid by the people at large, a majority of whom have, at every Presidential election since, and including 1876, voted against the Republican party. A few more years of Republican rule and popular government in America will be a thing of the past.

"NOT THE RESULT OF AGITATION BY OFFICE SEEKERS."

The Farmers' Alliance is conspicuous as an organization that is strictly nonpartisan, and yet known to exert a powerful influence upon the politics of the country. Another remarkable feature of that order is its influence upon the politics of the various sections in which it is the most prominent seems to be of a local and spontaneous character, and yet so general that condition that it resembles a perfect ground swell. The Alliance has no political leaders dictating its course and building their own fortunes, as has been usual in all political revolutions of the past. What political action it has taken has originated in the ranks as the result of education, and is not the result of agitation by officers.—National Economist.

THE VANCE RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Editor: In your report of proceedings of the County Convention you are in error in regard to the wording and strength of the Vance resolutions, as passed. The first resolutions brought in by the committee on resolutions, and which were rejected by vote of eight townships to seven, commended the course of Senator Vance and instructed our members in the Legislature "to vote for him under all circumstances and to use all honorable means to secure his re-election to the United States Senate."

The second resolution, introduced by Dr. G. W. Mossley, was highly commendatory and approved of his course in the Senate.

Mr. W. B. Stewart, however, so amended this resolution as to instruct our members to vote for Vance "first last and all the time," and added that while he did not insist on the exact words above, yet the purpose of his amendment was to make their instructions firm and positive. The exact words of the motion as amended were clearly stated by the chairman, the resolution as amended put, and carried unanimously. We fail to discover any milder instructions therein.

The writer of the above is in error about the resolution with reference to Vance that was voted down, coming from the Committee on Resolutions. The report of that committee was adopted in full without a single word being changed. We know for we wrote them ourself. As they were written they were passed, and as they were passed they were published in last week's issue and again in this. It was a resolution brought in by the Committee on Rules that was voted down. The resolutions of Dr. Moseley are in substance the same as those passed from the Committee on Resolutions. If Mr. Stewart made an amendment we did not hear it and fail to find it in the proceedings of the meeting as handed us by Mr. R. Herring, the Secretary.

But why this "much ado about nothing." All three of the Legislative nominees of the Democratic Convention of the 10th instant will vote for Vance's re-election. It is amusing to see some men striving for political capital at the expense of Vance's name.—Ed.

HOW TO GET A READING.

Not long ago an intelligent gentleman said concerning the contents printed in a leading religious journal: "I go through the paper examining the titles, glancing at the train of thought in each, reading some articles carefully and passing others by. When I find an article over two columns in length I omit it. This may not be a wise plan, but it illustrates a prevalent custom among readers. The spirit of the age demands condensation and brevity. We may fight against this tendency, and show the unreasonableness of the demand for short sermons, short newspaper articles and treatises on great subjects, but we cannot control the conditions which produce it. The best way is to recognize the fact and take advantage of the opportunity. The thoughts which have been elaborated in great books would find a wider circulation and accomplish more good if they were compressed into a smaller space. Many fine works are little read because they are so voluminous. The books of the Bible are all short. The largest of them can be read in a few hours. Divine wisdom is manifest in this provision which is necessary in order to adapt the Bible to every age.—N. Y. Advocate.

If by any unfortunate combination of circumstances the Republicans shall control the House of Representatives in the Fifty-Second Congress, this Government will be in a fair way to become a government of Reed, for Reed and by Reed.

Hon. S. B. Alexander, leading Alliance man a Democratic candidate for Congress in the 6th district, is out in a strong re-election in favor of the re-election of Senator Vance.

A GREAT SPEECH BY A GREAT MAN.

THE PEERLESS VANCE ON THE MOMENTOUS ISSUES OF THE DAY.

Many Things, Much Talked About and Well Understood. Made Very Plain.

HIS POSITION ON THE SUB-TREASURY AND THE NATIONAL BANKS.

We give below the 132d of Senator Z. B. Vance's speech at Goldsboro, which we promised our readers last week. It is substantially the same report that was furnished the State Chronicle. Let every one read and study carefully.

THE SENATOR'S SPEECH. Introduced by Chas. B. Aycock, Esq., as "the greatest North Carolinian, living or dead," Senator Vance spoke in substance as follows:

He began by stating that he was just from the conflict at Washington where he had been giving his best efforts to opposing the adoption of the iniquitous tariff bill, and watching the legislation and endeavoring to secure such as would not be unjust to our people.

He complimented the people of the State on their adherence to Democratic principles and urged upon them that no consideration should divert them from their steady support of the Democratic party, which was the conservatism of their peace and safety. The safety and welfare of the South was identical with the triumph and permanence of Democratic principles.

Sectional feeling has been revived in the North and the force bill now pending in the Senate will surely pass unless the Democrats can prevent by dilatory motions.

The Senator then went on to show how offensive the law could be made if the force bill should pass; how that Republican supervisors would do all the registration of voters, count all the ballots, give certificates of elections, and be clothed with power to vote in the army and navy of the United States to assist them in suppressing elections. "It is to this Godless crew that we are to look for honest government and honest elections."

FINANCIAL POLICY OF REPUBLICANS. That he had said before among various other things, that the Republican party is hostile to the interest of the masses, and in the interest of certain favored classes.

After investigation he had found that the policy of the Republicans have sprung up and reaped the fruit which should have come to honest labor. The agricultural and laboring classes have not held their own but have generally followed behind.

That policy led to the demonitization of silver, which was accomplished in 1873, partly by fraud and partly by intent on the part of the Legislature. There was so concealed among the mass of laws in the Revised Statutes that many members of Congress did not know that they voted for it and President Grant afterwards stated that he did not know that he approved the tariff policy by which the power of the bond-holders that this fraud has never been wiped out and the statute repealed. The bill to re-monetize silver, supported by him, was recently killed in the House through the efforts of Speaker Reed, and a substitute passed which leaves the quantity of silver coined in the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury who is under the influence of views which he obtains in Wall Street.

THE TARIFF. The Senator discussed the tariff at considerable length, and showed that while factories, &c., received benefits from the tariff, the farmer received none, and paid all the profits that the manufacturers enjoyed. The Senator illustrated the tariff by the example of the Farming States were helping the farmers down South. Senator Davis, of Minnesota, offered an amendment to the tariff bill putting binding twine, made of jute, &c., on the free list. Every Democrat voted for it and it was adopted. Vance then offered an amendment putting jute bagging on the free list, and every Republican except one voted against it. Binding twine was used by the farmers of the West for twine, and a substitute was used at the South. The Senator thought some of the Western Republican Senators were talking right on the tariff, but he found that they voted against it, though they were apparently anxious about the farmers' movement in the West.

When the Republican Senators voted against his amendment and defeated it, he told them that the difference between Democrats and Republicans, that Democrats voted from principle and Republicans "played for all in sight."

HOW THE TARIFF HURTS THE FARMER. The protective policy of the Republican party was operating against the farmer. The manufacturers of glass were protected to such an extent that the duty on common glass was absolutely more than prohibitory. Every manure factory protected by tariff levied tax on the farmer, whose products were not protected, and who was compelled to sell his cotton, corn and wheat in Liverpool at prices fixed there in competition with the products of the world.

THE FARMER PAYS A BOXES. If every man was benefitted by the tariff as much as he was taxed, no one would be benefitted and no one injured, but that if any were benefitted by the tax it was the owner of a home, made necessary by the increased price of his product, and the man who bought the product was injured to that extent. The farmer must buy the product of the farmer and pay to every mill owner a bonus, made necessary by the tariff, while the tariff made nobody pay him any bonus upon any thing which he raised.

The Senator gave many instances of unjust discrimination in the tariff bill against the South. Among others that the McKinley bill raised the tax on cotton ties from 35 cents to $1.03.

THE FARMERS HAVE TAKEN HIS ADVICE. The Senator stated that for years he had called the attention of the farmers to the fact that every other class was organized; the business men, the railroads, the great financiers, and that it was the duty of the farmers to organize in order to resist the encroachments of the money kings. He was glad they had taken his advice, and now according to some he was the first man that some of the members of this great organization would sland.

That he had never entertained sentiment or made any speech that was not for the interest of the farmers. That he had looked specially after their interest because they constituted the great majority of his constituents.

HIS POSITION ON THE SUB-TREASURY BILL. He said that it would give him pleasure to state that he had been endorsed by every county in the State that had been held. And yet he understood that there were some good and true men who believed, or had been taught to believe, that he had been untrue to the interests of the farmers.

That he had never intended to introduce the sub-treasury bill, and that he had never stated that he would do so, and that he had never intended to do so, and that he had never intended to do so.

sonian doctrine of "equal rights to all, special privileges to none."

He said he would be ashamed to ask for one class of his people privileges which could not be enjoyed by other classes. That the law ought to be impartial in its operations, and if the government lent money to one class it ought to lend to every class; but the government was not and could not under the constitution a lender of money to any class of its citizens. It was instituted for far different purposes, and could not do a banking business.

HIS DESIRE TO SERVE THE PEOPLE. He further showed that the government would be forced to meet all the demands of the people of the product deposited which should exceed 20 per cent., and how speculators knowing exactly the quantity of the different products deposited could corner the market and manipulate the prices.

He said it had always been his desire and purpose to carry out the wishes of his people; that he had always done so, and that, if this bill was constitutional he would vote for it whatever effect it might have.

STAND UP TO THE DEMOCRACY. Stand up to the Democratic party, 40,000 sub-treasury bills would not help them as much as a Democratic Senate and House. Then the laws that oppress the people can be repealed—then further oppression can be prevented.

He begged them not to waste their strength fighting merchants, half starved lawyers and newspapers that are not friendly. They were not their enemies. "Stand within the ranks, go into the primaries and win—submit if you do not control."

They were promoting their own ends when they help the Democratic party. He assured the farmers that he would do anything he could for them that did not conflict with his oath of office, and closed with a handsome tribute to the Democrats of Wayne.

At the close of his speech cheers went up from a thousand throats, and multitudes pressed forward to shake his hand.

"THE SAMPSON DEMOCRACY WOULD TAKE THE PREMIUM AT THE WORLD'S FAIR."

The Kind of Men She Nominates. The Harnett Courier makes the following comment upon the action of the Sampson nominating convention:

In the Sampson county nominating convention, Wednesday, Marion Butler, Esq., editor of the Clinton CAUCASIAN, was nominated for the Senate, W. K. Pigford and R. R. Bell for the House, J. S. Bizzell for Clerk of the Superior Court, J. M. Spell for Sheriff, O. F. Herring for Register of Deeds, J. R. Beaman for Treasurer. This is a ticket that has never been beaten by any county in the State.

Mr. Butler is a gentleman of intelligence and culture, of a high order of intellect, a graceful and fluent speaker and an able debater and will reflect credit alike upon his county and himself, in the Legislature, and being a gentleman of positive convictions, and faithfully devoted to duty he will be led from this winter in the State Senate.

Messrs. Pigford and Bell are gentlemen of intelligence, sobriety, honesty and great personal popularity, and noted for their honesty of purpose and strict adherence to a faithful discharge of duty. Mr. Bell served in the Legislature four years ago.

As to the nominees for the county offices it is only necessary to say that each one was a renomination and that is the highest compliment that can be paid them, for no man is ever nominated to any place by the Democrats of Sampson if he has ever been known to flinch from a manly and faithful discharge of duty."

The convention unanimously and enthusiastically passed warm resolutions in praise of Vance and instructed the members of the Legislature to vote for him. This is just simply Sampsonian Democracy would take the premium at the World's Fair held at any point, and there is not a Democrat in North Carolina but what earned by his own hands and expects to see Vance re-elected to the United States Senate by the next Legislature, and he will get three hearty votes from the land of the "big blues" certain.

Extreme sensitiveness is a grave fault, not to say a sin. The people who are constantly on the lookout for affronts show that they are thinking about themselves a great deal more than is either healthy or Christian. They are often wrong, moreover, as to matters of fact. The world does not want to hurt their feelings. Their morbid imaginations conjure up a thousand slights where not one was intended. That a full grown man, with any honest work to do should torture himself by indulging in idle fancies of this kind, is a thing to make the angels weep.—Nashville Advocate.

IMMEDIATE ABOLITION WOULD NOT DO. The country is full of debtors who, if the banks were compelled to close all their business, "in the present financial condition of the country," would be unable to collect all their debts, where would debtors obtain the money to pay their notes? It could not be obtained, if nothing but the principles of finance to which he had been provided to take the place of the banks, and the property of thousands of unfortunate debtors would be sold under the hammer at ruinous prices and bought up by the speculators who happened to have ready cash.

HE FAVORED STATE BANKS. He favored the establishment of State banks of issue, based upon sound principles of finance, where people could borrow money upon their property, and he believed the repeal of the tax on State banks would be followed by good results in this direction.

SQUARELY ON THE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM. What is needed is extension of the banking privilege to the people of the States. That his votes in Congress prove that he wanted more money given to the people—this he tried to secure by voting for the free coinage of silver. He stated that he stood upon the State Democratic platform.

SOME PERSONAL ALLUSIONS. The Senator hoped his hearers would excuse him for some reference to himself.

He said 36 years ago he made his entry into public life as a member of the House of Commons from Buncombe county. Such a Legislature had never before or since assembled in North Carolina. It contained such names as Morehead, Graham, Gilmer, Fisher, Shipp, Winston, Ashe, Bizzell, Cherry, Dortch and others, all of whom have passed over the river and are resting under the shade of the trees."

In 1858 he was elected member of Congress.

Then he was a Union man and did all he could to keep his people out of the war, and that he stood for the Union as low as honor could permit, but when the people decided to go out, he went with them.

He felt, "whether thou goest, I will go; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God." Here he referred to the statutes of the U. S., regulating the subject of bonded warehouses.

That he believed the bill to be unconstitutional because it proposed to lend money to a certain class of farmers only; that money was not to be lent to all the people, but to farmers only, and to those farmers alone who raised cotton, corn, wheat or tobacco. All farmers who raise other products are excluded from the benefits intended to be conferred by the bill, and no person could borrow money under its provisions, no matter what security he could offer, who was not a producer of the five favored crops.

That he believed in the old Jack ably was not for him to say, but that he could say that he had served them faithfully and honestly. There had in all these years been no stain or scandal connected with his name. That his relations with his people had never been any difference between them except upon the sub-treasury bill.

A PLEA FOR HARMONY. All the people are so interwoven that what benefits one benefits all. That there was too much smart Alecky talk. Some folks outside the Alliance say they won't vote for the candidate for the legislature who will not pledge himself to vote for Vance; and some folks inside the Alliance say they won't vote for any candidate who does not pledge himself to vote for Vance—and in pops a Radical.

LET DIRTY LINEN BE WASHED ON THE BACK STEPS. That if Democrats have any dirty linen to wash, don't wash it on the front steps the back yard is the place for that.
