THE NEW GAS GUN. Description of the New French Wes-

At headquarters of the Lon lon Scottish Rifles yesterlay afternoon some interesting experiments were conducted with M. Paul Giffard's appliance for the employment of liquefied gas as an explosive —o., to be more strictly accurate, one should say as a means of propelling projectiles—in place of gunpowder. M. Paul G.ffard's scientific reputation as inventor of the pneumatic tube and of the 'G.ffard injector," so largely used in connection with steem power, stands so high thet any invention to which his name was attached would be worthy of attentive onsideration. The weapon now introduced by him, however, is something more than an ingenious appliance; it is a discovery which not only promises to revolutionize the gunmaker's art, but is applicable also many other purposes as a motive power. Those who are interested in the Giffard gun claim that it is 'he military weapon of the future. The klea of u ing liquefied carbonic acid gas as a propulsive power is not new, but M. Giffard is the first who has turned it to practical ac-
