The Arena. We have just read the January number of The Arena. It is a Library of thought on great living issues. Seldom if ever have we found more in one copy of a magazine of interest and profit. Hamlin Garland's Story, "A Spoil in Office," commences in this number, and if it holds out as it commences it will be a charming production. Unlike most magazines, The Arena is out-spoken and progressive, it digs at the very root of the great problems of the day, it seeks for the causes that produce the varied results that are tramping around us every day. This magazine will prove to be one of the best educators and most potent factors in the great reform for purging politics and turning the Republic of Washington back to Jeffersonian principles of Democracy.

RED HILL ALLIANCE UNION. President Butler Present and Speaks. (Special Correspondent.)

The Sub-Alliances of Taylor's Bridge township, forming the Red Hill Union, held their regular quarterly meeting at Red Hill on Saturday, January 23d.

The first Union of this kind ever held in this section was organized about eighteen months ago. It was probably the first ever organized. The idea must have originated here. Since then they have grown popular and have spread over many States.

The news that President Butler would be at the meeting on Saturday brought out a much larger crowd than usual. The regular program of discussion was prepared and given over to the members of the Union. A most interesting and profitable dinner was spread, enough to have fed twice the number of people.

If a stranger from another county had been at this meeting he would have been surprised. He would have said "I thought you farmers were poor, but you seem to be extravagantly rich, you have a most bountiful dinner here and plenty to spare." But any farmer present would have answered yes. We have plenty of "hog and hominy," but we have no money. Our money is in the bank, in the form of provisions of six cent cotton. And this is true, the farmers are poor for money. They have plenty of everything but money, and a cruel government will not unless by special request. But you should always sign your name. Let everybody always sign your name. Let everybody always sign your name.

Miss Mary Jane Edge was married to Mr. L. E. Lay of Moore county, Rev. W. S. Mevin officiating.

At the residence of the bride's father, Mr. D. S. Tatom, Miss Cora Tatom was married to Mr. J. A. Kintaw by Rev. William Brunst, Jan. 6th.

We have had one marriage since leap year came in, and think we are doing splendidly for so a time.

We attended the first quarterly Conference on the Bladen Circuit, center Jan. 1st. Rev. D. D. Swindell P. P. preached a grand sermon to a very attentive audience notwithstanding the day was very cold and disagreeable.

High Sampson. (Special Correspondent.) Mr. Editor—High Sampson is on a boom in schools since the Christmas festivities are over. Four Literary schools have opened in the vicinity of Newton Grove and one at the light fantastic place, mixing the ornamental with the useful. This augurs well for a brighter era. Beaver Dam High school has opened with very flattering prospects with thirty-five students in attendance the first day, with Mr. Fowler as Principal. This is a new school, with a new and commodious house, finished in every respect with every modern appliance. Mr. Fowler says it is the best school house in the county. This school certainly deserves patronage, and the patrons of the school certainly deserves much credit for getting it up especially Messrs. E. T. Britt, Jas. Britt, and E. Howard. The patrons hope to have a first-class school. Board can be had with several families contributing to the school at $6 to $7 per month.

Salem Items. (Special Correspondent.) The Philanthropic Literary Society of Salem High School was the recipient a few days ago of 30 volumes of books from Washington, D. C., most of which are valuable documents. We acknowledge the receipt of them with our hearty appreciation and thank. We are not quite sure who the donor is, but we accord them to our esteemed Congressman, the Hon. R. F. Grady.

MARGARET GERTRUDE. Died, Dec. 23d 1891, Margaret Gertrude infant child of M. T. and Minnie Crumpler aged 7 weeks. Our little babe only came to brighten our home for a little while, but it left a vacant place there, well as in our hearts.

Tis hard to break the tender cord, When love has bound the heart, The heart 'oh! hard to speak the word, We must forever part.

Dearest loved one we have laid thee In the graves cold, dark embrace, But will cherish still thy memory, Till we see thy heavenly face.

That "Tired Feeling." The newspapers are having a good deal of talk and some of it "tired feeling," so much spoken of in medical advertisements, in connection with the ill-health of females. It may be a source of hilarity to witty paragraphers, but not to the women, who, by overwork and a disregard of the laws of health, have elapsed into a condition bordering on invalidism. What most women need is to be relieved of some of the slavish work that piles on them, and a free and judicious use of strengthening tonics such as P. P. P. (Prickly Ash, Poke Root and Potassium), the greatest blood purifier and invigorator in use. Superior as a builder up of women, being back lost energy to the body, and color to faded cheeks, restoring the appetite, and thus renewing in her that hearty vitality long lost. P. P. P. cures all blood diseases, such as Rheumatism, Spindles, Gout, Scrofula, and all ulcous affections, even vanishing that melancholy enemy of man, Dyspepsia. All druggists sell it.

—The new year is with us now for the performance of those new resolves we made for the year. It is a time for reform in all things, the times are thought to be hard, and to many they are the toughest ever experienced, but this will always be the natural condition of all who do not save a dollar for a "rainy day." These times are upon us and while we are seeking redress, we must not forget if we are to realize it must be in the future, so we must take care of what we have before us.

—What is coffee and aristocracy? We judge it to be contrary distinguished from that class of aristocracy who date their family history of merit and distinction for generations back, where blood as pure as the Castilian flowed unadulterated, not only of noble character but tempered with the highest elements of mental and moral development they distinguished themselves from the common herd of humanity. This form of aristocracy we have record of, and occasionally an isolated family is found that have some rare fellows, but this is so rare that the efforts of Ward McAllister, who recently endeavored to get his four hundred out of the great city of New York was unsuccessful.
