Mr. H. H. Dringham added two new birds to his hawk string in this office, about 175 in all.

We are sorry to hear that there is no material change in condition of Mr. W. H. Hobbs who is still unable to be up.

We are glad to note some needed improvements on our streets, which have been very disagreeable in wet weather.

We are sorry that Capt. Smith is still sick. Has not been able to be out at all this week. Some things are forced out this week.

The report going through the State press that the negro Sam Wilson had to be carried to Goldsboro jail to prevent his being lynched is untrue. The negro has made no threats.

The County Commissioners met Monday, Mr. Matt Marshall was the only one present. We are sorry to know that Mr. Jack Hobbs was home on account of sickness.

Mr. W. C. Rich received quite a painful hurt at Warsaw last Wednesday in trying to board a moving train. He was dragged some distance while holding on and was right badly bruised.

Rev. J. T. Gibbs, Presiding Elder of Fayetteville District, preached a very strong sermon at the Methodist church Sunday night. Rev. F. D. Swindall, P. E. of Wilmington District, was also present.

There is a holding claim against the Bank here will have to present a copy of their claims, and a sworn statement of same. Bank copies and forms for statement are to be had at THE CAUCASIAN office. You will save trouble by getting them.

Read the Story we are now running under the Lion's Paw. There is a great deal of practical sermon in it. The story is new, and has not been published in any paper. It commenced in the first issue. We can furnish a copy of it that to now subscribers.

Complaints from the lower part of the CAUCASIAN did not come in. We believe the papers were mailed. We will report him to the post office.

Have on hand copies of the same, which will begin to every new subscriber. This Magazine is one of the foremost of the world's periodicals. It deals with living, vital subjects. It discusses them ably, honestly, fairly. Among its contributors are some of the world's most famous authors and statesmen. Read our offer elsewhere. Now is a chance to get a copy of this Magazine. Every new subscriber can get one.

Miss Kate Williams, the attractive daughter of Mr. D. H. Williams, of Warsaw, N. C., who has for the past two months been visiting her sister, Mrs. G. D. Ellsworth, of Washington, D. C., was called home a few days ago on account of her sister, Miss Rena's severe illness. We are sorry to know her return was caused by so sad an occurrence, though our hearts are always made glad at the coming home of "our girls." We are glad to state Miss Rena is improving.

Every one who will send us in a new cash subscriber we will give a copy of that great reformer Magazine THE CAUCASIAN in another column. To every one who will send us in a club of ten new cash subscribers we will send this Magazine a whole year, commencing with the January number, containing in addition to a hundred other authors, Hamlet Garland's great story "A Spoil in Ohio," the latest picture of farm life and the best presentation of the great issues of the day we have yet seen or we will send any other Magazine desired.

For two new cash subscribers, we will give a copy of "Main Traveled Roads" or any other 50 cent book advertised in this paper.

A Young Attorney. Mr. T. M. Fry was among the successful candidates for law license before the Supreme Court last week. Mr. Lee read for member Mr. H. E. Faison and then attended the Law School at the University, Fayetteville, which stood very high.

Mr. Faison's career for our young attorney, has had advantages and has had advantages. He has had a very bright and successful career, has had advantages and has had advantages. He has had a very bright and successful career, has had advantages and has had advantages.

Within the past few months, before and during his sickness, I talked with Mr. Beaman on his spiritual condition. He assured me that he was satisfied as to his future. I urged upon him the importance of personal faith in the Saviour of sinners. He replied: I heard the questions you asked those persons received into the Church, and I can answer them all conscientiously. In the life of our friend now closed, there is far more than in the life of the average man—an emphasis, a power which impress it deeply upon the world in which he lived. In it there are lessons for the young man, and lessons for the old. May you have grace and wisdom to learn these lessons.

In the same order the procession proceeded to the cemetery, where the funeral services were performed according to the ritual of the National Farmers Alliance and Industrial Union when all that mortal hands can do was done and garlands and wreaths entwined and placed by tender and loving hands covered the grave. Rev. J. M. Ashby pronounced the benediction, and each one turned homeward with the example of a remarkable life, just closed, fresh in memory to stimulate the living higher deeds of duty and usefulness.

A Card. I desire to say to my friends and the public generally that I have accepted a position with Mr. T. M. Ferrell, where I had been pleased to see and wait on them all. I desire that they will call on me at this place of business.

Whiskey Peddler Caught. Deputy Collector George Jones arrested and brought here Thos. Morris from Davie county, charged with selling whiskey without license. He had about 80 or 40 gallons on hand when arrested. His trial comes off to-day. Mr. Morris was for nearly of Clinton.

Funeral of Col. J. R. Beaman

ATTENDED BY A LARGE NUMBER OF PEOPLE.

Hurried With Alliance Honors.

DR. MARABLE'S ESTIMATE OF HIS CHARACTER.

In last week's issue was given a short sketch of the strong character and eventful life of Col. John R. Beaman, one of the country's most valued and highly esteemed citizens, who died on Wednesday morning of last week. The funeral was to take place Thursday before THE CAUCASIAN could reach the people of the county, so there was no ray for the sad intelligence of Mr. Beaman's death to reach his host of friends and admirers; but through the few people who were in town on Wednesday. The day was cold, raw and windy and there were scarcely a dozen citizens from the country in town, but from the large number who came in next day from every quarter to pay their last respects, it would seem that every one and more who heard the news came. Mr. Beaman was a prominent and influential Alliance man, whose whole soul was in the great movement. He had more than once requested to be buried with the funeral service of the order. So at one o'clock on Thursday, Clinton Lodge (where his membership was) with the visiting members formed, as follows to perform that duty. Mr. Marion Butler, President of the State Alliance, who happened to be at home, acted as master of ceremonies, assisted by Mr. J. L. Parker as chaplain, Mr. Everett Peterson as lecturer, Mr. H. J. Peterson as Steward and Messrs. Perry James, T. J. Pugh, A. H. Merritt, Walter Draughon, Richard Page and A. J. Cooper as Pall Bearers, with the other members filled by twos in line. They marched from the lodge to the residence of the deceased brother. There the line of procession was formed as follows: Hearse containing corpse, with pall bearers on each side. The members of the lodge immediately following on foot. The family in carriages next, followed by the general attendants. As the procession moved off every bell in town tolled in the following order. First the College bell, followed in regular succession by the bell of the Baptist church, the court house, the Episcopal church, the Clinton Alliance lodge, the Presbyterian church. At the Presbyterian church the procession halted, the corpse was carried in, the members of the Alliance in procession marched down either side, (as many as could get in) and faced and remained standing while the organ played a funeral march. The floor of the church and the galleries were filled. Dr. B. F. Marable read the funeral services of the church, but before doing so, in a few highly appropriate and comprehensive remarks he spoke of Mr. Beaman as follows:

Friends, we have met to bury Mr. J. R. Beaman to render to him the last service that we can ever do. Most of us are burying a kind neighbor, many of us a dear friend. It is therefore a mournful pleasure to mingle our tears with the tears of the afflicted family.

For a half century Mr. Beaman has been a citizen of this town, and identified with all its leading interests so that it would be impossible to write a true history of Clinton, without giving a history of his life, and it would be equally difficult to write a biography of him without giving a part of the history of Clinton. So long has he been a prominent citizen that his name is almost a household word in the county. You have known him in the domestic relations of life—in the social and commercial relations—in his public relations to the community. He will bear cheerfully testimony to the fidelity with which he has filled every position in which he has been placed. As a citizen he was a man of no doubtful value. He was a brave man—a manly man.

His death makes a large vacuum in this community—one that can be filled only by the restoring hand of time. Outside of his family, many will long feel the loss of his helpful hand. He lived a noble and useful life. He was a man of noble character, and his life was a lesson to all who knew him. He was a man of noble character, and his life was a lesson to all who knew him.

He was a man of noble character, and his life was a lesson to all who knew him. He was a man of noble character, and his life was a lesson to all who knew him.

He was a man of noble character, and his life was a lesson to all who knew him. He was a man of noble character, and his life was a lesson to all who knew him.

International Lines Washing. Smoking with the gravity of sages and deliberating with an intelligence rarely equaled in business assemblies, the National Laundry association recently combined the pleasures of good fellowship with a lively interest in the wash tub. "Does France wash linen better than England?" was the international question of the hour, and to the elucidation of the problem M. Camille Simon read a paper stocked with information which only an expert could acquire. On the whole this country came out of the fray with untarnished colors.

In finishing certain classes of fine work our neighbors were credited with an uncommon degree of proficiency, but the balance of opinion inclined to the insular belief that it is hard to beat England at anything. Of course London had many disadvantages compared with Paris, where fogs and smoky chimneys are not regular institutions. A laundryman who wore a shirt for two days in England, could not expect to receive the same article would do service for three in France, and even then recent imputations upon the cleanliness of its starched front. "Stowing" was generally approved, and the too often sadly misleading words "Blanchisserie Francaise" condemned as mere words conveying what they seemed to indicate.

Purified English table linen was held up as a pattern the foreigner might envy, but the feeling prevailed that our home washed and ironed material might appear more kindly to the eye if it were wrapped and folded in the artistic expressive dress affected by our Continental friends.—London Telegraph.

The Tea Plant. The tea plant is of a genus of shrubs and is not a tree. It is a native of the mountainous regions of the East Indies. The seeds are sown soon after they ripen in holes four or five inches deep and three to four feet apart. As the rains come on it grows rapidly, soon forming large clusters, which require little care other than an occasional weeding. The leaves of the shrub are not gathered for "tea" until after the end of the third year from the time when the seed was planted. Each shrub is good for from seven to ten years, when it is cut down and young and healthy shoots allowed to rise. In spring the entire plant is covered with bloom, even the leaf itself taking on the appearance of a blossom.

Gathering the crop is a very particular job, each leaf being separately removed from the shoot. Three crops are usually taken in a year—March, May and August—the exact period varying according to the climate of the different districts in which it grows. After the leaves have been gathered they are first dried in the sun and then thrown into small furnaces furnished with sheet iron pans, in which they are
