> DALY'S GAMBLING HELL. In one of these institutions it is said that one man lost in a single night $118,-000. A young man from a western city recently arrived in New York and made collections for his firm. He went to Daly's gambling hell and lost all the ready money he had in his possession. He cashed the checks for the money he had collected and lost that. He left Daly's absolutely penniless, with his hotel bill unpaid and not enough money left to get out of the city. The profits of Daly's house are often as high as $20,000 or $30,-000 in a single day. When the game is opened at night, they start in with no money in the drawer. The first money that is deposited there is that passed in by the player who first buys his checks.
