goldbugs are yelling with did we tell you?" they "What "Didn't we tell you that supply and demand regulated this business ?"

"Didn't we tell you you made too much cotton last year?"

The "old he" goldbug journalist of this State, with immeasurably pious self-abnegation-with an in calculably vast amount of patronizing piety-says he is sorry for his free silver friends because the fact that cotton is going up knocks the spots out of their arguments. Oo-o-o oh! Wa-a-a-ah !! Um-m-mphm !!! See how we groan and writhe in agony at seeing the foundation of our "arguments" knocked from under us. And he is so sorry SO BORRY !!

The United States cotton crop last year was over nine million bales. and much of it sold for less than five cents. This year it appears the crop will approximate seven million bales. and it is now bringing over eight "Don't you see we are cents. right?" they yell. "We told you the law of supply and demand fixed the price. Now you see it, don't you?"

Do not these fellows know-but the very thought of a goldbug's KNOW-ING anything is a measureless absurdity. No, we won't say that exactly. We will be less severe, and say that the very idea of making a goldbug admit he knows anything along certain lines is an absurdity. We have vainly tried to get them into a non-personal controversy on the free silver or money issue. We have even left open little gaps in our presentations with a hope that some of them would step in and let us pen them up. We wanted to see them get out of such a controversy without "breaking" out. But they know take the Democratic party into conbetter than to try that. They are as shy of a controversy, or of anything that looks like an argument, as the old watch crow is of a gun. They won't be caught within range of one if they can help it. If they should be, they are just as sure to be knocked "galley west" by the argument as the crow is to be knocked over by the gun, if the gunner gets within range. Since we can only get in sight o them, we wish to put down something for them to peck at and tug at. and see what kind of antics they will cut up over it. Here it is :

Cotton is produced by the efforts of men. Money is produced by the efforts of men. Money is as much subject to the law of supply and demand as is cotton, or anything else. If the supply of money is searce, it will require more work or produce to get it than would be the case if it were plentiful. The supply of money can be ALTOGETHER REGULATED by man. The supply of cotton CANNOT be altogether regulated by man. Conditions which cannot be combatted by man affect the supply of the production of labor more or less every year. It is altogher IMPROBwhen the earth responds lav-ishly to the efforts of men to pro-duce from it, the necessaries of life, men ought to see that there is ductions at a stable value, and te facilitate their exchange. folks who call themselves Democrats. We don't think so.

Ten State Democratic conventions have been held this year and eight of them declared in favor of the single gold standard. Only one has declared for silver and one split wide open on the question. Those declaring for the gold standard are Kentucky, Iowa, Maryland, Ohio Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts. The one declaring for silver is Mississippi. The split occurred in Nebraska. In that State the silvermen were in a majority at the regularly called convention and adopted a silver platform. Then the gold standard gang bolted-went off and put up a little h-l of its own and whooped for the flery, gold metal.

In the face of these facts, how how much sense must a man have to perceive that the assertion that the "Democratic party is the party of silver" is false? Honestly now.

It is no longer a question as to rule of the Irishman as to snakes. whether the free and unlimited coinage of silver can be secured through the Democratic party. We know it cannot.
