Ten pension bills were introduced. Mr. Allen, (Pop.,) introduced a bill directing the foreclosure of the government lien on the Pacific railroads, and for other purposes; which was read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Pacific erument about one hundred million dollars, and for years past has managed to defeat every effort of the government to collect the claim. It keeps a strong lobby at Washington and uses money freely.

THE MONEYED POWER CAUSED THE PANIC IN 1893.

Up to the 27th day of April, 1893, confidence in the financial situation and the beginning of a great prosperity seemed apparent. On that day the bankers and moneyed men of New York had a meeting and laid the administration to repeal the purchasing clause of the Sherman Act, and thus prevent any increase in the amount of money in the country. These bankers determined to scoomplish this purpose even if, they had, as they expressed it, to pinch business throughout the country and and the beginning of a great prosperity seemed apparent.
