

THE CAUCASIAN.

Vol. XI

RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA, JANUARY 31, 1901.

No. 7

KING EDWARD VII.

TITLE OF THE NEW RULER OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

QUEEN VICTORIA DIES OF SENILE DECAY

Her Remains Taken to London Saturday—Court Ordered to Mourn One Year—Coronation Postponed.

Queen Victoria of England died at the royal palace, Osborne House, Isle of Wight, Tuesday morning, Jan. 22, as was reported in THE CAUCASIAN last week. She was surrounded by many royal relatives. The end was peaceful; she suffered no pain. After ruling for sixty-four years one of earth's mightiest nations, this woman—she was only a woman—lies cold in death, an insignificant atom of clay. Death, the great leveler, has triumphed. It is said her death chamber was a simply furnished room, a significant contrast to the show and glitter of royalty which attended her life from early childhood.

Queen Victoria was eighty-two years of age. She was queen of England more than half a century, during which time her nation attained the highest development ever reached by a European power. The English people called her "the Good Queen." She was, we believe, the best ruler England ever had.

The correspondent of the Associated Press learns that the cause of the queen's death, as officially given, was "senile decay." The doctors have adopted this expression as most suitable and truthful. They attribute the paralysis which attacked her as secondary to the general weakness of her condition, nor is it considered advisable for reasons of state, to intimate that her intellect was dimmed by this particular form of disease.

The body of Queen Victoria was embalmed, and taken to London Saturday.

The record of the last days of the reign of Victoria is not easy to tell. The correspondent of the Associated Press was the only correspondent admitted to Osborne House, and his interview with Sir Arthur John Gifford, private secretary to the late Queen, was the only official statement that had been given out. For several weeks the Queen had been failing. On Monday week she summoned Lord Roberts, and asked him some very searching questions regarding the war in South Africa. On Tuesday she went for a drive, but was visibly affected. On Wednesday she suffered a paralytic stroke, accompanied by intense physical weakness.

It was her first illness in all her eighty-one years, and she would not admit that she was ill. Then her condition grew so serious that, against her wishes, the family were summoned. When they arrived her reason had practically succumbed to paralysis and weakness.

The Prince of Wales was proclaimed King on Thursday, under the title of King Edward VII. The ceremonies are described by the Associated Press correspondent as follows: London, Jan. 21.—The coronation ceremonies with which King Edward VII was today proclaimed, at various points of the metropolis, exactly followed ancient precedents. When the inhabitants of the city were taken to St. James' Palace and the troops, about 10,000 soldiers, Life Guards, Horse Guards, Foot Guards and other cavalry and infantry regiments, had been brought from Aldershot and London barracks after midnight. Everybody and every thing was in order. The coronation began at St. James' Palace, where, at 9 o'clock, Edward VII was proclaimed King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and Emperor of India. The proclamation was as follows: "Whereas, it has pleased our late sovereign to call to his mercy our late sovereign lady, Queen Victoria of blessed and glorious memory, by whose decease the imperial crown of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland is solely and rightfully to come to the high and mighty Prince Albert Edward, we therefore, the lords, spiritual and temporal of this realm, being heretofore and now assembled with the lords of the council, with the consent of other gentlemen of quality, the Lord Mayor, aldermen and citizens of London, do now hereby, with one voice and consent of tongue and heart, publish and proclaim that our high and mighty Prince Albert Edward is now, by the death of our late sovereign of happy memory, become our only lawful and rightful liege lord, Edward VII, by the grace of God King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Defender of the Faith and Emperor of India, in whom we acknowledge all faith and constant obedience with all hearty and humble affection, beseeching God, by whom all things and queens do reign, to bless the Royal Prince Edward VII, with long and happy years to reign over us."

The King was not present. The coronation will not occur until 1902, the court having been ordered to go into mourning one year.

Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, now King Edward of Great Britain and Ireland and Emperor of India is in his 60th year. He is scarcely 5 feet 7 inches high, and rather stout.

A woman in West Virginia has signed a petition to hang her husband for the killing of her brother.

WHY CHINAMEN HATE FOREIGNERS.

They Look Upon Opium as a Great Curse and Blame Foreigners for the Destruction It Brings.

Nebraska Independent.

A missionary in a speech in New York stated that the chief cause of hatred of foreigners in China arose from what is called the opium war. All decent Chinamen look upon opium as the greatest curse that ever befell the nation and they lay the blame for the destruction that it causes upon the "foreign devils."

They all know that the import of opium was forbidden by a fierce and cruel war upon the Chinese until the emperor was forced to withdraw the decree. It is said that about $100,000,000 worth of opium is annually consumed in China. This terrible financial drain on so poor a people is the cause of China's extreme poverty. Not only do the better part of the Chinese curse the day that opium was forced upon them, but the sufferers from it also learn to hate a foreigner with a hatred that has no parallel elsewhere in the world. All this opium is shipped into China from India. The English owners of the poppy fields in India, call themselves Christians and patronize the churches, while by the million after suffering the most horrible tortures ever inflicted upon the human body.

Carpenter, in one of his recent letters from China, describes some of the effects of opium upon the Chinese. He says: "The craze for the drug is beyond description. I am told that Chinese mothers often sell their little girls to buy opium. Fathers sell their sons and husbands their wives. Dr. Beebe, who is in charge of the big hospital at Nanking, said that he had a neighbor who was an opium smoker. He spent all of his money in gratifying the taste and when that was gone sold his three children, one after the other, and finally his wife, to satisfy his opium hunger."

"I sit and watch the Chinese devote to their hellish work and as I do so it seems to me that I can see the pictures of the ruins which it is to create as it is scattered throughout the Chinese empire. I can see dens in which scores of haggard eyed, yellow faced mopes are lying and smoking away the wages which should go to the support of their families. There are women as well as men, and children as well as grown-ups. Here is a mother with her baby at her feet lying before the opium lamp. The pipe has fallen from her mouth and the little one is playing with it, sucking it. I can see the opium parlors of the rich and the hells of vice which I have seen at Shanghai—a score of pictures."

"It is any wonder that the Chinese hate foreigners, when they view the miseries that foreigners have brought upon them for the sake of gold? Is it a wonder that they are hard to convince that there can be anything good in a Christian civilization that has wrought such misery and woe in their midst? The government that did this awful wickedness now demands that the sovereignty of China shall be turned over to it and other nations professing the same creed. If China falls to keep such a contract—one that she was compelled to make by superior force—where is the moralist who can blame her? Meantime about six thousand of our troops are in China. If they stay until these negotiations are all completed, they will never see the green fields of America again. They will die in China of old age."

Another Alleged Kidnapping Case. Atlanta, Jan. 21.—J. P. Patterson has asked the police to find his son, Alonzo Patterson, a 13-year-old boy, who disappeared from his home in this city last Thursday. Mr. Patterson believes his boy has been kidnapped.

The family of Bass Frazer, who is believed to have been kidnapped two weeks ago from the Georgia Technological School, has given up hope of ever meeting him again. Frazer's brother, who left for his home in Alabama, today, has no idea that the $500 in gold, which he paid a negro who promised to restore the student to his family, will ever be recovered. The police are at work on both cases.

Olivia Raney Library. The Olivia Raney Library which cost $40,000, was donated to the city of Raleigh, last Thursday night by Mr. R. B. Raney, as a memorial to his wife, Mrs. Olivia Cowper Raney. The gift was accepted by the city, with appropriate exercises. The presentation of the building was made for the donor by Dr. M. M. Marshall pastor of Christ Church.

The Way North Carolina Democrats Look at the Election Law. Philadelphia Press.

"Acum—So you've got a political situation, eh? Do you expect to keep it?"

Rafferty—Faith, I do so, an' what's more I expect it to kape me."

The first six months after he gets married a man's heart is so soft it hurts every time his wife sighs. After he's been married a year he couldn't drive a nail pin in with a shoe brush.—N. Y. Press.

The postoffice appropriation bill carries an item of $3,500,000 for rural free delivery.

THE ANTI-CHILD LABOR BILL.

An Eloquent Speech Delivered in the Georgia Legislature by the Hon. Seaborn Wright, Who Spoke for His Passengers.

Nebraska Independent.

While the anti-Child Labor Bill, which was defeated, was up for discussion in the Georgia Legislature, Hon. Seaborn Wright spoke eloquently for its passage. His peroration, as follows, was a gem of oratory:

The spirit animating the opposition to this bill is the spirit of commercialism. It knows no pity. It chills every generous thought and deadens every holy feeling. It measures all things, manhood, womanhood and childhood by the dollar. The hearts and brains, aye, the puny weight of children, are valuable only as they can be coined into money. You lay our little children at the feet of Eastern capital and say all this will we give in exchange for your dollars.

I lift the standard of revolt today, and in the name of the South denounce the unholy traffic.

Mr. Speaker, I stood in the door of a humble cottage shadowed by the factory's smoke-stacks. The mistress of this home was the wife of a gallant Confederate soldier. They had seen better days. Death had kindly come to him and he slept. The remorseless hand of necessity had driven the widow and her children out from the old homestead to the humble cottage. As I stood, the gates of the factory swung open and amid a hundred children hers came. They were young children. The kindly walls of the nursery should have been around them. There was no spring in their steps, no light in their eyes; their cheeks were white, and I thought, standing in the presence of the children of this Confederate soldier, I would give every spindle and loom in the South to bring back the light to their eyes and see the roses bloom again upon their little cheeks.

I would like to see every bolt of cotton which white bosom opens to the warm kiss of Southern suns spun and woven in the South, but there are prices I would not pay for it.

We are standing today, Mr. Speaker, at the gate of the grandest manufacturing empire the world has ever seen. The men of the North and East with spindle and loom and treasure, are coming to our cotton fields. The laws of nature, stronger than all the laws of man, compel them to come. But, mark this truth, they are coming as our masters; our children and our children's children are to be their servants. I would put no restraining hand upon their coming. I would fling wide the gates and bid them enter; but, to help me God, I would never give my children to their little bodies had grown beyond the nursery walls, and the light of knowledge had dawned in their souls.

Last night I sat with my wife by the fireside of our comfortable home. I watched my eight-year old boy lay his head upon his mother's lap and close his tired eyes in sleep, and I thought except for the goodness of God he might be numbered among the thousand little toilers in the mills of the South through the long hours of the night. And then, with justice in my mind and pity in my heart, I said: "I will do for the children of my people what I would have them do for mine."

Bill Anthony's Coolness. "Bill Anthony was one of the best names that came out of the Spanish War of the man who can keep his head when others have lost theirs, says Richard Harding Davis in Everybody's Magazine. His coolly indifferent announcement to Sigbee, either showed a soul disciplined to the condition of an automaton, or a spirit which nothing could dismay. I once asked Captain Sigbee if the popular version of Anthony's speech was correct. He said it was, but that Anthony did not salute him as was generally told, nor preface his speech with "I beg to report, sir."

We jumped into each other in the dark," Sigbee said, "and if he had saluted and spoken with that formality, he would have been thinking of himself and of making an effect, and not of his duty. What he really said and did is better without all the advantages which came later."

Sale of Papers Prohibited. Cape Town, South Africa, Jan. 21.—It is believed that the presence of invading Boers in proximity to the western coast is due to preconcerted plans with European filibusters to land a large consignment of arms and ammunition at some point between Port Nolloth and Lambert's Bay.

Many traitors have succeeded in enlisting in the local forces and there have been numerous arrests. The sale of Reynolds Weekly Newspaper, of London, and the Review of Reviews, and Truth, has been prohibited here, as it was found that they have been circulating among the Dutch.

Girl Student Brutally Hazed. Wichita, Kan., Jan. 23.—Miss Pauline, daughter of the late Governor Llewellyn, was brutally hazed by women members of the Alpha Theta Mu Society of the Wichita High School. The letters "A. T. M." were burned across her forehead with nitrate of silver, and she says the doctors have told her the scars cannot be removed. She allowed reporters to look at the scars tonight, but refused to give the names of those who took part in the hazing or to tell how it happened.

Uncle Zeke's Sermon. Down in Oklahoma a preacher in delivering his farewell address said: "I don't believe the Lord loves this church, for none of you ever dies. I don't believe you love each other; I never marry any of you. I don't believe you love me, for you don't pay me my salary—only in wrothy fruit, and by their fruit ye shall know them, I am going to a better place; I am going to fill the place of chaplain of the penitentiary. Where I am yet cannot come, but I go to prepare a place for you."

OLLA POORIDA.

What "Squid" Thinks of Things in General.

Nebraska Independent.

This Legislature has not yet developed a wit.

The machinery is in the cities and the people move to it.

Hoola Boom is needed to impart some life to this Legislature.

Senator J. D. Glenn looks as if he were in search of a hypnotist.

Drink cold sage tea for night sweats, and change your politics.

The sense of feeling in fish is greater than that of seeing or hearing.

The measures introduced against lobbying purposes make very slow progress.

How would Cleveland an' Harrison do for the next Democratic candidate.

Geo. E. Badger had to be given 50 acres of land in order to be qualified as a State Senator.

Mordcaai and the Post quarrel is not only becoming old—womanish but actually nauseating.

In the death of Queen Victoria the world loses the greatest jewel in the crown of Thrones.

Hon. Josiah Turner the man who loves a fight is here looking younger than he did 20 years ago.

The Democrats propose to change the election law mainly to get rid of the necessity for buying votes.

A law ought to be enacted binding out the men who have children in cotton mills and loaf themselves.

The millionaires of New York should remember the looting of Tein Tain and Pekin by Christian soldiers.

The man who used a turkey-bird to shield his illicit distillery was up to the modern mark of shrewdness.

If Bryan does not take care he will become a millionaire and thus place himself out of the fun of another run.

Maj. F. D. Winston's political gyrations are almost equal to those of his brother Pat Henry's, though less gracefully performed.

The space between the storm doors of the Yarrowburgh House is used by the green horns of this Legislature for caucusing, introductions etc.

From the distillers point of view the dispensary is better than prohibition from the saloon mans standpoint prohibition is better.

The banks ought to have railings, so that customers may line up in the order in which they arrive. As it is the last is frequently served first.

A man in Rockingham doing a land office business on eighteen children in a cotton mill, bought a fine cook range and built the fire in the oven.

It is a good thing that face is not always taken as an index to one's character otherwise some a people would form wrong impressions on sight.

Addicks of Delaware, who is having such a gloomy time purchasing his way into the U. S. Senate, is a rich man. He should go West and buy a State.

Gen. B. S. Royster is a convenient sort of fellow because he can afford to take the exalted generalship under a Fusion and a Democratic administration.

Bob Glenn is an Ex-Senator and as a spouter has some superiors. He is evidently bent on making an impression. He did not bring his nigger typewriter to Raleigh.

In speaking on the Hunting Bill Senator Woodard said a five dollar tree would be cut down to get a 25 cent possum. Must be mighty big trees in his territory to be worth as much as an acre of land.

It appears that there were some undesirable professional farmers on the Board of Agriculture, hence the change in the law which makes practical farmers only eligible as members of the Board.

The judiciary committee of this Legislature as originally constituted—45 lawyers was found to be so ponderous that it had to be divided into three sections—heavy, middles and light weights and a sub-chock given to each.

There is a State and county tax of forty dollars on every dealer in wood. It is unjust because it falls chiefly on the townsmen, is therefore discriminating in its effect, and this same dealer has to pay purchase tax as well. It should be abolished.

The man who was tried in Rockingham last fall for shooting at a revenue officer and after being released on bond was put in a red shirt and escorted about the town by some of the best citizens in now serving a 3 years term in the penitentiary for passing counterfeit money.

Child Fatally Burned. Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 25.—The four-year-old child of Mrs. Mary Medin, was burned so badly today that it will die. The mother left her child in a high wind developed in flames. Her brother ran for a neighbor, who fainting when she saw the little girl in a high wind developed in flames. When the child's clothing was finally extinguished she was so terribly burned that death will result.

One of the Vanderbilts has built a million dollar swimming bath in connection with one of his palaces.

About twenty-three out of every 1,000 coal miners the world over are killed annually.

"BLEEDING KANSAS"

Twenty Women Stand Guard While Another is Held on a Barricade.

Wichita, Kan., Jan. 24.—Mrs. Carrie Nation, the famous saloon-wrecker, has now four wrecked saloons to her credit, wrecking the fourth to-day at Enterprise, near here. She left Wichita last night to prevent being hurt by a mob which pursued her around town and threatened to lynch her. As soon as she arrived in Enterprise she went to W. C. T. U. headquarters and held a consultation with the women of the order who had advised her to smash the Shilling saloon, one of the finest in the town. Later she armed herself with a hatchet and rocks and proceeded to the saloon of John Shilling and opened fire, smashing the large plate-glass windows, and then went inside and proceeded to ruin the fixtures. A large mirror behind the bar, several pictures of women, a large refrigerator, eight cases of wine and many bottles of whiskey were smashed. The bartender drew a revolver and threatened to kill her, but she laughed at him and dared him to shoot. Twenty women of the town stood guard in front of the saloon while she demolished the interior. After the wreckage was completed the women went down the street singing "Praise God, from Whom All Blessings flow."

The town marshal started to arrest her, but she dared him to touch her on danger of being hurt with her hatchet. He left her alone, and at last accounts from Enterprise she was still at large, but had not smashed any more saloons.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S PRIVATE WEALTH.

She Preved to be a Good Financier as Well as a Wise Ruler.

London Dispatch.

The Queen's private wealth yielded an income of about $1,000,000 yearly. This is exclusive of $1,925,000 annually from Parliament.

Her private income, as gathered from easily available sources; was from the duchy of Lancaster, upwards of $250,000; from 37,372 acres in the Queen's other estates, $125,000; from London realty, supposed to be $50,000; in consols and other securities, between fifteen and twenty millions. She inherited nearly $1,000,000 from the late Duke of Devonshire, and $2,500,000 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's estate of $3,000,000 forty years ago, and $2,500,000 in 1852 from John Camden Neild, the son of a rich jeweler.

The Queen was a clear-headed business woman, and of course, had the best financial advice in 1817, by the advice of Lord Cross, Lord Sidney and Sir Arnold White, she bought property for $300,000, the market value of which is now reckoned to be $1,350,000. She had estates in a vast German principality, the Prince Consort's