Casey's Case.

Law Notes is responsible for the following illustration of the convenient elasticity of a technicality in the right hands:

A Canadian gentleman, named Casey, was appointed to a government place which technically had to be occupied by a lawyer, which Mr. Casey was not. The benchers of the Law Society, however, undertook to obviate the technicality, and appointed one of their number to examine him as to his knowledge of the law.

"Well, Casey," said the examiner, "what do you know about the law anyway?"

"Well, to tell the truth," said Casey, modestly, "I don't know a single thing."

"I have examined Mr. Casey as to "I have examined Mr. Casey as to and distress from tortured muscles, aching his knowledge of the law," the examiner stated in his affidavit, "and to the best of my knowledge and belief he answered all the 'questions' entirely correctly."

CURE DIZZINESS

I feel it my duty to tell of the benefit I have obtained through the use of Ripans Tabules, I am twenty years of age and employed as saleslady in one of the large stores here. For six months I had been subject to spells of dizziness and tried several remedies without any marked benefit. I then decided to try Ripans Tabules, having seen them advertised a great deal in "The Record." I continued to take them for three months regularly, and was then feeling so well that I discontinued their use. It has now been a month since I have taken a single Tabule, and I have had no dizziness and am feeling splendid. I have recommended R-I-P-A-N-S highly to my friends and do not object to having this testimonial published at any time.
