Mosquitoes, as a rule, do not fly far. Light continued winds carry them away from their breeding places, but in heavy winds mosquitoes cling firmly to the nearest point of attachment. ### ZZKKKKKKK Farm Topics

FODDER LOSS.

It is the storm-beaten fodder that is left uneaten, and it is the loss of this fodder that compels the farmer to feed his hay. The loss of corn fodder is a waste of a portion of the corn crop. As the fodder, when properly preserved, is nearly equal in value to the grain, no farmer can afford to allow his fodder to be wasted.

BROODY HENS.

If any of the hens wish to go on the nest and remain let them do so. There is no better way to get a hen in good laying condition than to let her remain on the nest two weeks and then break her up. When hens go on the nest with the intention of hatching out a broad they do so because they are out of condition for laying. To attempt to break them up at once is to violate natural laws, and nothing will be gained by it, as such hens will lay only a few eggs and then become broody again. When they are on the nest give them but little food, a meal once in two days being sufficient.-Mirror and Farmer.

A WHITE WHITEWASH.

Each spring there is a number of inquiries regarding the formula of the whitewash used by the United States Government on lighthouses and other buildings which it is desired to keep white. This whitewash is more expensive and troublesome to make than the ordinary kinds, but it has a brilliancy and a whiteness which it retains, and in these respects differs from the ordinary mixture. Take a halfbushel of good stone lime and slake it in boiling water, keeping it covered. After straining add a half-peck of salt, dissolved in warm water, three pounds of ground rice, boiled to a thin paste, one pound of clear glue, dissolved in warm water, and one-half pound of powdered Spanish whiting. Mix together thoroughly and let it stand for a week. When wanted for application, heat and apply as hot as it is possible to handle it, using a clean brush for the purpose. It is best kept in an iron receptacle.

GRASS FOR CHICKS.

There is scarcely one thing so conducive to the health of young chicks as a plat of ground where grass or clover grows abundantly. The little fellows run about gathering a sprig here or a worm or bug there, all the time growing and gaining strength and vigor. Chicks that stay where the grass grows are always thrifty, never have gapes, and invariably grow rapidly. They learn early in life to hustle, and after they have reached maturity the habit does not forsake them.

A woodland makes a delightful spot for rearing chicks, the shade, the insect life and the grass all combining to aid the growth and develop the health of the chick. The only objection to such a place is the danger from wild animals and hawks, but this is not always the case, and when possible, we should dvise selecting a rolling, sparsely timbered woodland. In any event, hough, select a spot where grass grows abundantly.-Home and Farm.

KICKING BLOCK FOR HORSES. Nearly all the present methods of endeavoring to prevent a horse from kicking are more or less dangerous to the safety of the animal, and in the case of a valuable animal this is almost as much of a consideration as the safety of the owner or the groom. The most common method in vogue is the use of the chain and log, but it is an almost everyday occurrence for an animai to be ruined for life by this de-

An exceedingly simple method, and one which is claimed to be very effective, was recently the subject of a patent granted to George Lewis. The general appearance of this device is shown in the accompanying cut. The rear part is hard and unyielding, constructed preferably of wood and in the shape of a letter "U" and the fore part consists of a strap which holds the block in place, making a snug fit around the horse's foot at the fetlock

The instant a horse attempts to raise his heels in an endeavor to kick, the effect of the device is to place the foot or hoof upon the floor and to practically prevent him from kicking. In a short time a kicking horse gives up the effort and is entirely broken of the habit. The device also prevents the horse from pawing, capping his hocks, bruising his legs, and from in various other ways injuring and disabling himself.-Philadelphiz Record.

Needed Something Stronger.

Bishop Potter is an enthusiastic golf player. Some time ago he was on the links at Saranac, accompanied by a caddie who was himself a golfer of acknowledged skill. The bishop made ready for a mighty drive, and, with one tremendous swing, he topsed the ball. Of course, he was derived of the consolation which in uch cases serves to soothe the temper of the layman. All he said was, /Sh-sh-sh-sh-sh!"

It was his way of relieving his feelings. Then he tried again. This time he scooped up some cubic feet of sod, and once more the sibliant but inoffensive and ineffective protest escaped his lips. For the third time the bishop teed his ball, for the third time his driver missed the mark and for the third time he unburdened his oppressed soul as above. The caddie could stand it no longer. "Hang it, man!" he exclaimed, "shsh-sh-sh won't send that ball where you want it to go!"-St. Louis Post
