If one has a hog that roots, then ring him or her, and that trouble will be over. As a matter of fact, only a small proportion of hogs care to root if they are well raised, given shade in the summer, plenty of variety of food, a warm bed in winter and good water to drink. The same thing applies to wallowing. Of course, if a hog makes a place in the soil in which to lie, and the rain fills the hole with water, then the animal will wallow, but what is easier than to fill in the depression with soil and break up the wallowing habit? If one expects to keep the bog grounds free from filth and stench as he does his stables, let him give them the same care, and there will be no trouble. The writer knows of a hog farm whose owner makes a most comfortable profit yearly with young pork because he advertises in local papers and invites the public to visit the farm and see the cleanly manner in which the animals are raised. Owing to the proximity of the farm to the town, many take advantage of the offer, visit the farm and become regular customers. This is one of the many ways of making the farm pay .- Indianapolis to make a costly ending. Our plan has always been to feed generously and market all surplus stock as soon as ready to sell. Greenbacks and hard cash eat nothing and never have the roup. An incubator may be superior to a hen in some respects, but it does not equal her in devotion and oneness of purpose. You never find an incubator hatching on a door-knob. If you need any pure bred poultry, now is the time to purchase, as the breeders are well stocked at this time of the year, and you can get birds much cheaper than later on.

THE PIG ON THE FARM. Pork production should form an important industry upon our Maine farms. It can be made profitable, not only in connection with the dairy, but as a leading feature of the farm work. I have no sympathy with the system of keeping swine as it is conducted upon some farms. The hog is entitled to a good, comfortable, clean home. He is never at his best in any other place. When he is kept simply to work over the manure of other anigreat force, reducing it to splinters and | mals, he is not in his proper place. I would never keep hogs on the manure pile; keep the manure from heating in some other way and give the hog a home so arranged that he can have opportunity to exercise his natural instinct of cleanliness. He will then be at his best and will make the most possible growth out of every pound of food consumed, and at the same time will produce a product in pork that cannot be excelled. A roomy, light station. The dead were at once taken

The matter of breed is of secondary importance, unless the raising of pigs for sale is to be made a feature of the business. If it is, the breed selected should be the one best adapted to the locality and with which the buyers are most familiar. I think the Chester as bred in Maine will please a larger proportion of buyers than any other, and hogs of that breed, either pure or grade, respond readily to feed and are easily managed. The hog is naturally a grazing animal. I have observed that when at pasture they fed as many hours a day as did our cows. The pasture, the tersburg have made concessions to the green crop, with roots, and corn to finto the John A. The situation in Poland and other sources for pork production, and if they can be used in connection with the wastes from the dairy, the results will be still more satisfactory. During this year 16,145,114 pounds have been sold (many orders coming in for car-load shipments), which is the largest business for a single factory in the world. This is only the inevitable result of the original Good Luck plan-to furnish the best baking powder in the world at the lowest price-to cents a pound. Good Luck is the best because it is purest, because it produces the lightest, whitest, sweetest of baking. These results are due to its unequaled leavening force, to the fact that it contains no adulteration whatever. It is the most economical because it takes less to do the work than any other baking powder. If your dealer doesn't sell Good Luck let us know, and we'll see that you are supplied at once.
