EDITORIAL BRIEFS. POWERS PARDONED

The Democrats have held their last primary, but the bitter fight between Spent Eight Years in Jail and Crag and Kitchin is still on.

If all the disappointed candidates fail to vote the Democratic ticket this year, the party is certainly gone.

The Democratic race for office in this State is only for the rich. The others are financially disfranchised.

The next Legislature should pass a law requiring the Governor to stay in his office at least half of his time

Craig has again announced that he is not the candidate of the trusts, but some still think the evidence is against him.

The Johnston Presidential boom should start four years in advance eight years. Powers was in jail at next time, if it wants to have a fair Georgetown, while Howard was in showing with Bryan.

The reason there are not even ty where his mother has fitted up the more Democratic office-seekers this year is probably due to the fact that the others could not afford the price.

Governor Glenn, on last Sunday, in the Arlington National Cemetery, made a speech. He lauded everything in sight. Said he had no apology to offer for the part the South took in the Civil War, and said "it would do so again under similar circumstances." He said: "This nation should unite in caring for the Confederate dead as well as the Union dead." That's what Senator Butler tried to enact into law when in the United States Senate. He would have done it, too, had not the Southern Democrats opposed it. They said: 'We propose to pay our own coldiers for the great work they did." They are doing it, too, aren't they? Religious services were held in East Orange, N. J., on Sunday last under free-and-easy conditions. They do not appear to have been entirely successful, although the participants were invited to smoke and soda water was served to the thirsty. These services were conducted in the open air, for fear that the worshippers might suffer if they were brought into the more decorous surroundings of a church. Their comfort was consulted in every detail. It was feared that the devotees might not be able to endure the physical strain of standing while the Doxology and the hymns were sung. So they were invited to keep their seats.
