Speaking of the recent Democratic primary in Virginia, the Wilmington Star says:

"The Norfolk Virginian-Pilot tells us that the combined expenses of Messrs. Mann and Tucker in their contest for the Governorship of Virginia 'slightly exceed $26,000.' At that price the Governorship of a State gets entirely beyond the ambition of a man who hasn't money enough to justify such lofty aspirations."

That is a high price to pay for a job as servant of the people. Yet, the Democratic nomination in this State cost over forty thousand dollars, and the Virginians did about as much mud-slinging as the Tar Heel Democrats—and for less money.
