A Government-Owned Railroad in Alaska.

(Baltimore Evening Sun.)

President Taft's recommendation that the Government buy and extend the Alaska Central Railway will not surprise those who are familiar with the situation of affairs in that territory. The trouble with the existing laws regarding the development of coal lands there—laws as yet unrepealed, but held up by Executive order—is that they do not permit individuals to take up claims large enough to justify mining of the coal, while at the same time they prohibit agreements in advance between the individual settlers such as would allow profitable mining. The proposed leasing laws, while guaranteeing a fair return to the Government for the valuable coal rights, do not promise the tremendous profits which a syndicate of the Morgan-Guggenheim type usually demands. Such syndicates ask a monopoly or nothing. A railroad, of course, is necessary to get the coal to tide-water, and if private enterprise won't build it the Government must.

The experiment might be interesting for the light it would throw on the value of Government ownership in this country.

TO ENCOURAGE POULTRY RAISING.

Land and Industrial Department Southern Railway Has Issued a Folder on Subject for Wide Distribution.

Washington, D. C., February 4.—In an effort to encourage and increase poultry raising in the South, the Southern Railway Company, through its Land and Industrial Department, has issued a folder for wide distribution calling attention to the superior advantages offered in the States traversed by its lines for the profitable development of this industry.

The big home demand for poultry products with prices higher than in other markets, and the ideal conditions prevailing in the South for raising chicks at low cost are two of the good arguments set forth in the folder. It is a fact that every Southern city of any size imports annually thousands of dollars worth of eggs and chickens. Eggs will average throughout the year at least five cents more per dozen than in the North. The Southern poultryman has a market near his plant and does not have to consider long hauls and uncertain markets.

For the small poultry raiser who is satisfied to make a living out at first, gradually building up his business with his profits, the initial cost of a poultry plant in the Southeast should not run over $400, according to an estimate given in the folder. Many prosperous Southern poultrymen began as low as $100 first capital. Several acres of a land, small laying house and run is about all necessary for poultry raising on a small scale in the Southeast, and such a plant will make a healthful, pleasant living for the family and under intelligent management will in a few years result in a large industry.

The Southern Railway Company, is very much interested in the development of the poultry industry, as it is in other industries and activities of the people served by it, and Land and Industrial Agent M. V. Richards at Washington, and Western Agent Charles S. Chase, Chemical Bldg., St. Louis, are prepared to give all possible assistance without charge to prospective poultrymen desiring to locate in the Southeast.
