Tuberculosis has been classed as "pestilence that walketh in darkness," deaths from this disease being so constant and uniform that they are accepted as inevitable, so far as the human family is concerned. It is stated that compared with tuberculosis mortality, all the deaths from war, famine, plague, cholers, yellow fever and smallpox are very insigficant, and yet tuberculosis, like every class of germ diseases, is absolutely preventable, and results from criminal indifference. CRABBING AS A BUSINESS.

"With me and a dozen other men along the south shore crabbing is the most important work of the year. Last year I sold 8,000 dozen soft shell crabs at an average of one dollar a dozen. The common way of eatching soft shell orabs has been to pole over the flats at low tide and scoop the crab wherever seen. But this method is slow and uncertain sompared with keeping the crabs in confine-ment until they shed.

I get my crabe from the men who make a business of eatching hard-shell orabs for market, These men are the celers of the early summer. For crab-bing they stretch a long line in the water sometimes for half a mile, between two poles or buoys, at intervals of a few feet it is baited with bits of salted cel. The crabber sails along this line which is raised from the bottom by means of a book fastened to the side of the boat and scoops in the crabs with a net. The Family Goat.

The goat as a milk producer is hardly appreciated in this country. But in the old world the family goat is only less esteemed then the family cow. The milk is considered better than that from Jersey cows for culinary purposes.

I have the crabs graded into six cars. In the first are those that will shed inside of twelvt hours : then those that will shed inside of twenty-four hours and so on. The crab that is going to shed will eat only one thing so far as I know and that is just what I can't afford to give him-a soft shell crab. That is the reason I have to grade them so carefully. If a crab sheds in a car containing crabs that will not shed for several days, the unfortunate will be set upon and devoured at once by the other crabs. There is no mercy among them. "The way in which we tell a crab

This is one of Just have them wet, and the cakes will fall out when cold, as white as snow, all I have watched this incident too often to the crust sticking to the mold. Frost doubt its truth. A crab sheds four or very thin and give icing a very delicate five times during its life-once every flavor, or just a little lemon juice or year. When it reaches the last stage before shedding its shell, say within twelve hours, it becomes torpid ; then it is safe to leave the crabs in that state all together. The new crab is one-third larger than the shell he leaves.

"If left in water, a soft shell become hard within twenty-four hours. If the crabs are intended for home consumption I take them out of the water as soon as they have shed, but if they are to go any distance, I leave them in for several hours so as to make the skin tough enough to stand transportation.

As to the time a crab should be boiled expert opinions vary from five minutes to half an hour. After many experiments, I am inclined to think that half an hour's boiling does no harm. If the pail of crabs is lifted to the edge of the pot of boiling water and slightly tilted, the crabs will walk to their doom upon hear. ing the bubble of the water. It is pleasant to think that the crab's last impres. sions may have been a satisfaction to him ; the gurgle of water ... . ... his- ears as he takes the plunge, and before he discovers that he is not in the great South Bay all things are indifferent to him.

The change in color from dark green and blue to cardinal red takes place the moment the crab touches the boiling water, so that color does not indicate thorough cooking. Crabs in market are so often cooked in order that they may keep better that it is no wonder some people imagine that the crab good through life in a scarlet coat. I once saw a game picture in which a bright red crab was crawling off a plate.
