A North Carolina Composer.

Music Trades, a weekly Journal pub lished in New York, which is devoted to everything pertaining to music, in its issue of May 23rd, has a short sketch of Charles H. Harris, a native North Carolina Composer. Mr. Harris was born in Raleigh in 1873, and is a son of Joseph A. Harris editor of the Hillsboro Observer. At an early age the the young man showed a decided fondness for music, and after hearing a selection played, could at once sit down at a piano and play it over as it was written. His first composition was entitled "Magdalene." Among his other compositions were "Rosalie," "When You Were a Little Boy," "Must We Part for Aye?" "Sweet Mem ories of the Past," "Oh, There's Bound to

THE FEAR OF THUNDER

Safest Place During a Storm is in the House, Where There is no Draught.

"Electric storms are far less dangerous than the majority of people imagine." writes Edward W. Bok in June Ladies Home Journal. "That a severe lightning storm is terrifying admits of no question, and will sometimes bring un easiness to the heart of the strongest man. But the real danger is slight. The chances of lightning striking a house for example is not one in a million. Particularly is this true in cities, strung as most of them are with electric wires. The greatdanger from electric storms is in the country, and even there the danger may be lessened if the simplest and most common-sense of precautions are exercised. The surest electric cenductor is draught, and if, when a thunder storm approaches, it is seen that all windows and doors liable to occasion a draught are kept closed, the danger is at once reduced to a minimum. If a woman is "caught" out in a thunder-storm the safest shelter is a house; the most dangerous a tree, partics ularly an oak tree. It is a peculiar, but nevertheless a proven, fact, that the oak is the most susceptible of all trees to a current of electricity. Over fifty per cent, of trees struck by lightning storms during one summer, the Government statistictian tells us, where oaks, while the beech tree was the least harmed. Therefore, the worst possible shelter in an electric storm is under an oak tree while by all odds, the safest place is in a house and out of a draught. * * The actual danger (from an electric erner. storm) is, in truth, not from the lightning nor the thunder but from the nervous am glad I did not kill you, and I'm Robbins, T. The President Vetoes the River and Harbor Bill.

It requires the exercise of rare self confidence on the part of President Cleveland to oppose his will to that of the Unisaid in veoting the Riverand Harber Bill; and when the last has been said about it the conclusion will perhaps be pretty general that how meritorious features of the bill were the whole affair smacks rather decidedly. If bait designed to bring in substantial returns in the way of political patronage. As has been suggested, if a Congressman's district call for an appropriation to deepen a river which, if deepened, would be of no advantage whatever to commerce, he will most probably insist on an appropriation for the river. Although the bill is now a law we give below the President's objections to the measure.

There are 417 items of appropriation contained in this bill, and every part of the country is represented in the distribution of its favors. It directly appropriates or provides for the immediate expenditure of nearly $14,000,000 for river and harbor work. This sum is in addition to apprepriations contained in another bill for similar purposes amounting to a little more than $3,000,000, which have already been favorably considered at the present session of Congress. The result is that the contemplated immediate expenditures for the objects mentioned amount to about $17,000,000. A more startling teature of this bill is its authorization of contracts for river and harbor work amounting to more than $52,000,-000. If, therefore, this bill becomes a law, the obligations which will be imposed on the Government, together with the appropriations made for immediate expenditure on account of rivers and harbors, will amount to about $80,000,000. Nor is this all. The bill directs numerous surveys and examinations, which contemplate new work and further contracts, and which portend largely increased expenditures and obligations. Many of the objects for which it appropriates public money are not related to the public welfare, and many of them are palpably for the benefit of limited localities or in aid of individual interests. I learn from official sources that there are appropriations contained in the bill to pay for work which private parties have actually agreed with the Government to do, in consideration of their occupancy of public property.

The public Treasury will be confronted with other appropriations, made at the present session of Congress, amounting to more than $500,000,000. Individual economy and careful expendature are sterling virtues, which lead to thrift and comfort. Economy and the exaction of clear justification for the appropriation of public moneys by the servants of the stigated by private interests, and promote local or individual projects, their allowance cannot fail to stimulate a vic-Bachelor of science: W.
