POETRY.

"It is the gift of Poetry to call us every place in which it moves; to break round Nature an odor more exquisite than the perfume of the rose, and to shed over it a tint more magical than the blush of morning."

The Baby.

Down beside the gentle river flowing wide
Where the lovely aspens quiver,
And the comely willows shiver,

Darling baby plays;

Zephyr kisses the cheeks of baby;
Birds enchant the ears of baby;

Angels joyful gather, may be,

Where the baby strays.

Flowers of beauty there are seeming,
Like the face of cherub dreamin;

Baby's face appears;

Baby's laugh, like silver, jingles,
And the echo with it tingles;

The dual music nicely tangles,

On the "pears' ears."

Baby holds a tiny Bramble,
Round the baby lambkin gambol;

With its infant spirits ramble,

Straying where it strays.

Lo! the wood-nymph yonder sleeping,
Round her ivy-leaves are creeping;

No—her charming eyes are keeping

Watch o' baby's ways.

God's alone are here beholding,
Baby's mother now unfolding;

Graceful beauty—nature's molding—

Art compelling praise.

Forth she comes th'reeowering bushes

In the sparkling water rushes;

Naiads admiring, watch her blushes;

Far from human gaze.

Horrer! see the flood is seeking

To prevent her now from speaking!

Yet how wildly she is shrieking!

While her child is in view—

While of death she's sadly thinking;

While the fatal fluid she's drinking;

While her lovely body's sinking;

"Willie, babe, adieu!"

Willie, you have lost your mother forever,

Never can you find another;

She has loved you like no other.

Let you laugh away;

Night is coming—see it yonder;

Where will little baby wander?

On the thought what heart can ponder!

Let a mother say,
