POETRY.

"It is the gift of Poetry to hallow every place in which it moves; to breath round Nature an odor more exquisite than the perfume of the rose, and to shed over it a tint more magical than the blush of morning."

"Follow Me."

The Master's voice was sweet— "I gave My life for Thee; Bear thou this cross through pain and loss, Arise and follow Me."

Through the long summer day I followed lovingly; 'Twas bliss to hear His voice so near, His glorious face to see.

Oh, sweet to follow Him! "Lend let us here abide," The flowers were fair, I lingered there, I laid his cross aside.

Yes, hard to follow Him! Into that dreary land; I was alone—His cross had grown Too heavy for my hand.

My Master's voice was sad, "I gave My life for thee; I bore the cross through pain and loss, Thou hast not followed me."

So fair the lilyed banks, So bleak the desert way— The night was dark, I could not mark Where Thy blest footsteps lay.

"Fairer the lilyed banks, Softer the grassy lea, The endless rest of them who best Have learned to follow Me, Canst thou not follow Me, All weary as thou art?"

Oh Lord! Oh Lord Divine! Once more I follow Thee; Let me abide so near Thy side, That I Thy face may see.

I'll bear Thy cross through pain and loss, So I may cling to Thee.
