POETRY.

"It is the gift of Poetry to hallow every place in which it moves; to breathe round Nature an odor more exquisite than the perfume of the rose, and to shed over it a tint more magical than the blush of morning."

[From the New Orleans Picayune.] THE CHAPLAIN ON REVIEW. BY TENELLA.

At a review of the Army of Virginia, the Rev. Mr. Patterson, Chaplain of a North Carolina regiment, appeared on the field in his cassock and bands, with his prayer book in hand. As the regiment passed before him, Gen. Lee raised his hat and said: "I salute the church of the Living God."

"There's to be a grand review, boys, to see that your arms are all right. Mars Bob will excuse a shabby coat, but never a shabby fight; And though to-day we are playing, and it's nothing but review, Who knows but to-morrow morning we'll have real work to do; So look to your cartridge boxes and see that your guns are clean, Your knapsacks all in order, and bayonets fit to be seen. Don't mind if your coats are tattered, so are your battle flags too, For many a hard campaign Mars Bob has carried us through; But brush up your old gray jackets, and do the best you can, For he looks behind the uniform and sees the real man."

"Yes," said the Chaplain softly, "and my men God holds a review Through me every Sunday morning, and this is what you must do. Prepare your souls for inspection, and see that your hearts are right, And that every man among you is armed against sin to fight. Remember your daily actions are the uniforms you wear, And God will pardon its tatters, if the love of Christ is there; For the flesh is often weak when the spirit is truly willing, Unless with his ammunition our souls we are always filling, For though in the eyes of the world your outward man may be right, Without the love of the Savior you can never win in the fight. So, brush up your uniforms well and do the best that you can, And remember, behind the soldier, God looks at the heart of the man."

'Twas thus a word in season the Chaplain spoke to them then, And it fell, not by the way-side, but into the hearts of the men; And when they stood for inspection, before the grand review, He, in his dress of office, stood with the regiment too. 'And he said, "though I honor, my coat of Confederate gray, I come in full dress uniform, a priest of the Church to-day, And this is the battle flag that before my men I'll bear."

And then, as he spoke, he showed them the Book of Common Prayer, And when in these canonicals, at the grand review he trod, Gen. Lee uncovered his head to "THE CHURCH OF THE LIVING GOD."
