> Good Cough Medicine for Children. The season for coughs and colds is now at hand and too much care cannot be used to protect the children. A child is much more likely to contract diphtheria or scarlet fever when he has a cold. The quicker you cure his cold the less the risk. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the sole reliance of many mothers, and few of those who have tried it are willing to use any other. Mrs. F. F. Starcher, of Ripley, W. Va., says: "I have never used anything other than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for my children and it has always given good satisfaction." This remedy contains no opium or other narcotic and may

GRACEFUL TEA GOWN. The Empire lines of this season's styles are particularly adapted to that most fascinating of all a woman's wardrobe—the tea gown. The points of the scarf were weighted with heavy silk tassels and the fin-ishing touch to this "Frenchy" gown was added by the soft crushed gir-dle and knot of heavy black Liberty satin. Though this particular de-velopment was elaborate, the design of this gown is so simple as to east-ly lend itself to plainer tastes and needs. Thus by substituting a dark shade of cashmere for the crepe, bordering the scarf and overskirt with a band of taffeta and omitting the lace on sleeves and underskirt one could have an exceedingly pretty and at the same time practical gown.

WHAT BECAME OF THE CONSTABLES?

Magistrate of Wardmalaw, With 43 White Men and Over 1,200 Negroes, Wants Reward Offered for Discovery of Murderers of Four Constables Serving Under Him—Has Employed Detectives.

CHRONICLE BUREAU,

COLUMBIA, S. C., FEB. 5. Magistrate Lebby Clement, Wardmalaw, is here to-day asking the Governor to offer a reward for the disstables acting under him and for the Apply the blacking to the stove as arrest of parties setting fire to build-

Judge Clement says he has had five constables disappear mysteriously in contact with the blacking during since his appointment as magistrate, two of them within the last four months. He attributes the situation to the organization of a negro secret society and the aversion of negroes to any of their race serving as constables, whose main duties are arresting law breaking negroes. He is obliged to use negro constables because of the scarcity of white men on the island (there are only 34 white men and these rule over 1,200 negro voters in Republican times and so many now that there is no counting His present constables have received warning that they must quit.

He has offered to duplicate any rewards the Governor may offer and has employed private detectives. The situation is becoming unbearable and really alarming.

BRIDGE WHIST.

Presbyterian Standard. What do we know about bridge whist? Have we ever played a game? Have we ever seen a game played? Never. What do we know about the bubonic plague? Did we ever have it? Did we ever see a case of it? Never. What, then, do we know about it? Enough to keep away from it, and to advise others to do likewise. This is all we know about bridge whist, ers to do the same. It is not so fatal makes its victims useless. They are not worth killing. Of course, we mean those who have a malignant, chronic case of it. And there are such. Its ravages are mostly among the women They seem peculiarly susceptible to it, especially society women, women who are not under the stern necessity of working, and who have no serious purpose in life. When women of this

Looked at morall, there is nothing intrinsically wrong in bridge whist. Neither was there anything wrong with the barren fig tree. But there was nothing good in it, and this was its fatal undoing. The owner believed that a fig tree ought to bestir itself and do something. He planted it for this, and cultivated it for this. There is nothing good in bridge whist. A dozen ladies may play it day by day for weeks and months at a time, and nothing good results. They will be no better off at the end than they were at the beginning, either in body, mind or estate. They will simply wish to keep on playing. They will feel less disposed to do anything else. We know an old lady, upwards of eighty years of age, almost blind, who can do nothing but knit. Her eyesight is so bad that she cannot knit fine lace, or do any other kind of fancy knitting. She can knit only plain, coarse white mits. She finds some demand for these, and she spends her time knitting these. It is not a great occupation, but it beats bridge whist four to one. This octogenarian, poor and blind, is doing more with her remnant of life than any four able-bodied women are doing by giving themselves to bridge whist. Some married women fall victims to this plague. They have homes where their presence is constantly needed, where they could make themselves very useful. But afflicted with the whist rabies, they are restless. They the impatient to be at their club, and they rush through their domestic affairs, giving them a lick and a promise. Home-making is secondary, and domestic duties are growing more and more irksome. Husbands, good, honest, hard-working husbands, are sometimes neglected. Their comfort is not carefully looked after. They must take their chances for a scrappy dinner or a cold supper, if business detains them late. Bridge whist must be attended to. It has the right of way, and must not lag, though the heavens fall.

Some mothers fall victims to this plague. Then the children must get along the best they can in the circumstances. If either bridge whist, or the children must be neglected, then it is all the worse for the children. They can be left to the tender care of nurses. That is all that nurses are fit for. They cannot play bridge whist. The children would be the better of a little more maternal care, but they can get along without it, whereas bridge whist would stop stock still without these mothers to keep it go-

As already confessed, we have no personal acquaintance with bridge whist, but we do have an extensive acquainance with women, and we are fully persuaded that they are too good for bridge whist. We believe woman is the finest of God's earthly workmanship. We are reluctant to put the angels much above her at her best. Cherishing such views about women, we feel perfectly sure that God made her for some higher, nobler purpose than bridge whist. Had this been the end, He might have left out about three-fourths of the best ingredients. She would need no literary capacity, no artistic talent, no heart qualities, such as sympathy and love, none of that wonder-working tact for home-making, only gray matter enough to discern the difference between the cards, and a memory something after the order of Blind Tom's, 'only this and nothing more."
